Socking in New Zealand. Mr. Mellon Hopes On. Doubly Dangerous Blast. He Repented Too Late.

—BY ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, April 16.

UNPLEASANT NEWS from New Zealand, noting at Auckland, ten thousand unemployed enjoying "an orgy of looting in Auckland's business district," marines and blue jackets firing on the rioters, "local police powerless to stem the wild hordes of men and women raging up and down Queen street, smashing plate glass windows, pouring into stores for pillage."

SUCH CONDITIONS in New Zealand, most radical of civilized countries, governed practically on what we should call "a socialistic basis," interest Congressmen who think all our troubles can be solved by "socking the rich."

In New Zealand there are no "rich" to sock, and those that adopt a socking program are compelled to attack and rob small store keepers.

Our thoughtful statesmen may learn from New Zealand that mere "socking" will not solve anything.

ANDREW W. MELLON, Ambassador in London, tells the Pilgrims' Society he does not doubt our capacity to deal with world conditions.

If Mr. Mellon is optimistic, others should be. Where the average prosperous man has lost a dollar, Mr. Mellon has lost a thousand. His property on paper doubtless amounts to less than it did in 1929 by two or three hundred millions of dollars.

It is true that he probably has a hundred millions or so left, but if you think he who loses a quarter of a billion finds comfort in some millions left over, you don't know human nature.

MR. MELLON still has his aluminum business, oil concerns, steel investments and other properties that made President Harding describe Mellon to this writer as "the second richest man in the world" before Mr. Harding made him Secretary of the Treasury.

These Mellon properties and others are intrinsically WORTH as much as ever. He cannot, at present, take out as many dollars in dividends as he once did, but everything that is sound will come back.

THE IMPORTANT and hopeful fact is that all enterprises, as the able John Hertz puts it, "have been put through the wringer." The water has been squeezed out, the property remains. The "wringer" process is not pleasant for those that once included water values among their assets, but to go through the wringer is a healthful process, as when a fever patient's temperature comes down to normal.

We had a high fever in 1929, many were dreaming dreams, seeing visions. Now we see more clearly, the wise will build up FROM WHERE THEY ARE, and we shall gradually climb up to normal.

DESTRUCTION BY explosion of Ohio's 14-story state office building at Columbus, which caused the deaths of six men, involves a condition more serious than destruction of property said to have cost six million dollars.

The accusation that the building was wrecked by nitroglycerin or TNT, in a war between competing labor unions, will worry Mr. Green and other responsible labor union officials, already disturbed by the introduction of racketeer methods in some labor unions of Chicago, New York and elsewhere.

IN OLD DAYS, hangings and other public killings, including death by torture, took place in public. The horrible sight was supposed to act as a warning and deterrent.

We know that such sights interested mobs that gathered to see the torture and hear the shrieks. Capital punishment exhibitions rather increased than diminished crime.

Our modern civilization, wisely, kills human beings in private before few witnesses and has discontinued torture officially. It is well, however, to point out, after such executions, that capital punishment is unpleasant.

This should be widely known, for capital punishment is apt to develop, among us, on a big scale if the present crime wave continues.

AT WALLA-WALLA, Wash., Walter Dubuc, 19 years old, the younger of two men guilty of murdering an old farmer, made it clear that he regretted his crime, too late.

As he was dragged and pushed to the gallows he repeated:

"Don't hang me, don't hang me."

His last words as the black cap covered his face were:

"I don't want to be hung, Jesus save me."

He should have said that before killing the farmer. That was the time to ask Jesus to save him.

WILLIAM J. BURNS, called the "great detective," is dead. He was a good businessman and negotiator, rather than a great detective. He knew how to find intelligent detectives, and how to make the regular police useful to those that could pay for good service.

He has carried into the grave, and beyond it, interesting secrets, some that would disturb important men if made public.

AGREEMENT ON STREETS VETOED BY P. S. C.

State Body Refuses to Sanction Plan Relieving Railroad of Huge Expense

Philadelphia Company subsidiaries and the Bell Telephone Company have blocked possible early start on the erection of Pittsburgh's new Pennsylvania Railroad Station and other railroad improvements totaling $20,000,000, a Public Service Commission decision made public today indicates.

The decision handed down in Harrisburg dismisses the application of the railroad and the City of Pittsburgh for approval of an agreement for street relocations involved in the new terminal plans.

Commissioner Samuel Walker, who, with former Commissioner Charles H. Young, heard the testimony in the case, asked leave to file a dissenting opinion.

UTILITIES IN PROTEST

The utilities, including the Pittsburgh Railways Company, Duquesne Light Company, Equitable Gas Company, Citizens Traction Company, Allegheny Traction Company, Allegheny County Steam Heating Company, Bell Telephone Company and the Seventeenth Street Incline Company, protested ratification of the agreement on the ground that the railroad, after agreeing in 1925 to pay the damages to other utilities involved in the street relocations, refused in the agreement involved in the present controversy to pay such costs.

The railroad had questioned the right of the Public Service Commission to inquire into certain phases of the contract, but in its rejecting the agreement, the Commission cited court decisions in justification of its contention that its jurisdiction extends into all ramifications of such a contract.

JUSTIFICATION DENIED

In rejecting the agreement, which would have necessitated the closing of the Seventeenth Street Incline, the Commission states it does so on the ground that it cannot find that the proposed changes are justified in view of the hardships and burden they will lay on the protesting utilities.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—(INS)—Charles G. Dawes, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and a veteran of the World War, will be summoned before the House Ways and Means Committee to testify on bills proposing cash payment of the $2,400,000,000 soldiers' bonus, it was announced today.

The former Vice President and diplomat may become the "ace" witness of forces fighting the bonus payment, but Dawes will be invited by the committee in his capacity as one of the highest ranking financial officers of the government.

Secretary of the Treasury Mills and Gov. Meyer, of the Federal Reserve Board, will be invited to appear as government officials.

Backers of the cash payment plan, anxious to get action on the measure, plan to complete their presentation on Monday. The committee stood in recess today.

Mellon Gives Trophy To Kaye Don, Racer

LONDON, April 16.—(INS)—Ambassador Andrew W. Mellon today presented a silver trophy from the people of Detroit to Kaye Don, famous English driver of racing cars and speedboats.

Child's Kidnapers Hunted Despite Plea of Family

WILMINGTON, Del., April 16.—(INS)—Despite the desperate plea of Harold Brodsky, whose 9-year-old daughter, Hilda, was kidnaped yesterday morning while on her way to school, to let him negotiate with the abductors, police of Wilmington and Philadelphia were instituting a grim search today which, if successful, will result in the hanging of the kidnapers.

Delaware is one of the few states where kidnaping is a capital offense and the knowledge that capture will mean death has prompted the Brodsky family, frantic with fear for the child's safety, to ask police to give them a free hand in dealing with the kidnapers who sent a letter to Brodsky telling him that police interference will mean death to the child.

The Brodsky family will not even admit the kidnaping, but the news leaked out when a family conference was held at the home a few hours after the child was abducted.

COLBY, Kan., April 16.—(AP)—Thomas County officers today held in custody Richard Reed, 53, who, officers said, confessed he had kidnaped and killed a 7-year-old girl yesterday between Atwood and Colby.

FLARE LIGHTING LINDY ESTATE HINTS SIGNAL

Mystery Woman Leaves 'Jafsie' Home With Flier's Attorney; Tension Grows

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

TRENTON, N. J., April 16.—A magnesium signal flare suddenly blazed up early today on the lawn of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's home near Hopewell, N. J., brilliantly illuminating the lonely white house atop Sourland Mountain.

Its blinding glare, visible for miles around the countryside, brought scores of sleepy farmers running toward the scene in the hope that it might signify a happy turn in the efforts to recover the abducted Lindbergh baby.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, in charge of New Jersey state police, asserted the incident was due to an accident.

BELIEVED SIGNAL

Spectators nevertheless clung to persistent conviction the light portended a more mysterious development in the hunt for the abductors of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., aged 21 months, who was stolen from his nursery March 1.

Observers were inclined to place significance in the occurrence especially because it was known that Col. Henry Breckinridge, Lindbergh's legal adviser, kept up a lonely vigil in the home of Dr. John F. Condon, in New York City, far into the night.

It was believed that he expected some message by telephone or agent from the kidnapers with whom either he or Condon, the signer of the famous "Jafsie" advertisements which led to the payment of the $50,000 hoax ransom, had re-established contact, according to reports.

MYSTERY WOMAN

Breckinridge left the home of the aged lecturer at Fordham University several times in the course of the afternoon and evening yesterday. On a trip started just before midnight, he was accompanied by an unidentified woman.

Condon himself was absent almost all the time while Breckinridge was at his home. He and his bodyguard, Al Reich, ex-pugilist, went out the last time about midnight and did not return until early today.

Great mystery was also thrown about the visit to the Lindbergh home shortly before the flare lit up the countryside of Miss Greta Grey, of Minneapolis.

After emerging from the Lindbergh home, where she spent about 45 minutes, she told newspapermen she gave Lindbergh some "important information."

Miss Grey added both Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh appeared well. She declared she was a friend of Lindbergh's mother.

TENSION GROWS

All these happenings seemed to intensify the tension created by the belief the heightened activities of the principals in the kidnap pursuit indicated a "break" was near.

Bolstering this feeling also were reports from Norfolk, Va., where the three intermediaries of Lindbergh gave indication their phase of the negotiations with the abductors had reached a final stage.

Fleischer 'Double' Barred From Ship

BOSTON, April 16.—(INS)—A man closely resembling Harry Fleischer attempted at Halifax, N. S., without success to secure passage to Boston aboard the steamship Fernfield, Capt. H. M. Brushett, of the freighter, told police today upon the arrival of the Fernfield.

Fleischer, member of the "Purple Gang" of Detroit, has been sought since the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, but his possible connection with the case has not been revealed.

CLAIMS PINCHOT PUT ANTI-DRY IN RACE

Adams Campaign Secretary Quits, Charging Plot to Divide Davis' Strength

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, April 16.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot was openly charged today with financing and abetting the campaign of William S. Adams, anti-dry candidate for United States Senator, for the purpose of splitting Pennsylvania's anti-prohibition vote.

The allegation was made in a signed statement by James R. Young, of Harrisburg, in announcing his resignation as secretary of Adams' campaign committee. Young also implicated former Senator Joseph Grundy in the scheme to run Adams as a means of taking enough anti-dry votes from Senator James J. Davis to nominate Gen. Smedley D. Butler, the Governor's slated candidate for the Washington post.

Funds collected from Capitol Hill employes are being used to help the Adams' candidacy, Young charged.

Adams is a Harrisburg hotelman and on several previous occasions made unsuccessful runs for public offices. Young stated in a letter addressed to Adams that he undertook to act as secretary of the latter's campaign committee in "good faith, believing that you intended to make an honest campaign for the Republican nomination at the primary election upon your platform advocating the repeal of the prohibition amendment and laws." The letter continued.

"Upon undertaking my duties, I have discovered that you are not making such an honest campaign and do not expect to obtain the nomination, but that youu were placed in the field by ex-Senator Grundy and Gov. Pinchot for the sole purpose of diverting votes from Senator Davis.

"I am unable to proceed further with you and will have nothing to do with such a campaign."

Quiz 'Auction Bride' In War Vet's Death

VIRGINIA MAY PARKER

Miss Parker, onetime "Miss North Side" and recent auction bride ("I'll marry for $5,000"), arrested and long-questioned by homicide detectives today seeking the details of the stabbing-death of William J. Gallowich. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Girl Who Offered to Wed for $5,000 Held by Police

Virginia May Parker, the diminutive brunette who offered herself in marriage for $5,000, was arrested by homicide detectives today for questioning in connection with the death of a war veteran in what police termed a drunken brawl in her home, 1535 Brighton road, shortly after midnight.

While the sleuths say Miss Parker had no part in the slaying, they grilled her throughout the night to learn the details of the fight which resulted in the death of William J. Gallowich, 36, of 3 Matson street, from a stab wound in the chest. Miss Parker's stepfather, Peter Hofer, was also arrested.

Louis Friedel, 31, a boarder in the Hofer home with whom Gallowich is said to have fought, was arrested today, after he had asked the time of Sergt. Samuel Wheeler of the homicide squad, in Short street. His brother, Andrew J.

SHOWDOWN ON INSANITY PLEA NEAR

Darrow, Recovered, Ready to Battle Kelley's Move to Disqualify Naval Officer

By JAMES ADAM
International News Service.

HONOLULU, T. H., April 16.—With Chief Defense Counsel Clarence Darrow reported ready for the fray again, a showdown on the insanity defense in the Fortescue-Massie trial was demanded today by Prosecutor John C. Kelley.

Kelley has hurled down the gauntlet to the 74-year-old defender whose sudden attack of gastritis yesterday forced a day's postponement in the trial, and today's legal battle promised to be both bitter and brilliant.

The center of the fight is a serious, quick-witted young Naval officer, Lieut. Thomas H. Massie, who is straining at the leash to unfold before a mixed-blood jury of his peers what is confidently expected to be a startling confession of the shooting of Joseph Kahahawai at the bungalow home of Mrs. Grace Hubbard Fortescue, his mother-in-law.

FOUR INVOLVED

Lieut. Massie, Mrs. Fortescue, and two Naval enlisted men are on trial charged with the second degree murder of Kahahawai, accused as the leader of a gang of five hoodlums in a brutal attack on Mrs. Massie.

Darrow retired early last night, assuring his friends that he felt his old self again, and that he would be ready when court convened for whatever the prosecution has to offer.

Lieut. Commander James E. Porter, assistant medical officer at the Pearl Harbor Naval yard, warned the grizzled veteran that while his mental faculties have

It is alleged the company refuses to make payment, claiming it is not liable under the policy.

Judge Balks at Perjury, Daughter Goes to Jail

RALEIGH, N. C., April 16.—(AP)—Declaring he could not perjure himself even to save his daughter, John H. Harwood, former State Superior Court judge, pleaded guilty to a charge of mutilating court records in an embezzlement case against her and accepted a sentence of a year in Wake County Jail.

The daughter, Miss Lola Harwood, at the same time entered a plea of guilty to a charge of embezzling $4,823 state funds while employed by the Revenue Department, and was sentenced to two years in State Prison.

Harwood brought the climax to the case shortly after the jury had been completed for the joint trial. Suspended from the bench a few minutes before his arrest, he wept as he told how he had sought to change figures in record books to save his daughter.

As the former judge stood before the court to make his explanation, the daughter's sobs sounded through the courtroom, and his wife held a handkerchief to her bowed head.

Miss Harwood's embezzlement was said by defense counsel to have taken place in her effort to recoup 1929 stock market losses.

'AUCTION BRIDE' HELD IN DEATH

Friedel of 1926 Letchworth street and Miss Parker's stepfather, Peter Hofer, and were detained for questioning.

When the battle was over, the body of Galbwich lay near a pile of broken glass from a window that had been smashed. Miss Parker told detectives she hold his head in her lap until the officers came.

An autopsy was to be held today to determine the cause of Galbwich's death. While police say they are certain Orell was due to a knife wound, they admit there is a possibility that he might have been pierced by a sliver of glass from the window.

Hofer's wife, Mrs. Helen Hofer, told police Friedel and Galbwich came home shortly after midnight and began to fight in the kitchen. She, with her husband and the four children, were asleep in the adjoining room. Galbwich, a boarder, had been drinking all day, Mrs. Hofer said.

RELATES TRAGEDY

Relating the tragedy to the detectives, Mrs. Hofer said:

"We were asleep when Friedel and Galbwich walked in through the kitchen door. They began to fight. I ran into the kitchen and attempted to stop them. Galbwich told me to get out or he would hit me.

"The two continued their fight in Friedel's room. I sent my daughter, Virginia, for a policeman, but when she returned Friedel was gone and the other man was lying on the floor."

Virginia was named Miss North Side in a 1926 beauty contest. Several months ago she offered to marry any man who would give her $5,000 to help her mother.

Galbwich, a World War veteran, was one of 10 children and lived with his parents.

ALICE IN UTILITY LAND — By Quin Hall

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

With Apologies to Lewis Carroll

CHAPTER VI.

Alice was becoming very tired. It seemed to her that she had been wandering endlessly through the strange Ballot-Box Land and she was becoming afraid that she never would find her way out.

"I should hate to have to stay here all the time among these strange creatures," she thought. "It would be dreadful never to know quite where one is going. And I am so tired of having weird animals tell me how stupid I am."

She wandered on through the maze of paths and was becoming quite lonely. Suddenly she heard a peculiar laugh. It seemed familiar. She hurried in the direction from which it seemed to come. It was, in fact, the Gryphon.

"How in the world can I get out of here," she asked.

"Do you really want to get out?" the creature demanded.

"Of course I do," Alice replied.

"I wondered," the Gryphon declared. "So many people get lost in Utility Land. They talk a lot about finding their way out of this tangle of woods. But not many of them really try very hard."

"But I do want to get out," Alice insisted. "Please tell me how to do it."

The Gryphon thought a moment.

"There's an old fellow who knows. We'll go to see him."

The pair walked on for a ways till they came to a place where several paths met, forming a small [illegible]. At one side an old man was sitting on a large rock. He seemed to be asleep. In fact he seemed to have been asleep for a long, long time. Ivy growing at the side of the rock was beginning to entangle itself with his white beard, but this didn't bother the old man. He slept peacefully on, occasionally emitting a dignified snore.

"Hey, you, wake up!" shouted the Gryphon, as he shook him vigorously.

The old man slowly opened his eyes. Then he brushed the ivy away and sat up straight.

"Old Man Ballot," said the Gryphon, "This little girl's name is Alice. She wants to find her way out of here."

"Yes, yes," answered the old man and started to fall asleep again.

"But I'm lost and I do want to find my way," insisted Alice, almost shouting to keep him awake.

"Do you really," asked Old Man Ballot. "I'm glad to hear it. I can do lots of things for people. But I've been neglected so long that I'm not used to having people ask for help."

The old man got up, stretched, then started to lead them down one of the paths. In a short time they came upon Humpty Dumpty High Rates wall. Humpty gave a little scream when he saw them. The old man gave the wall a hard kick. The wall rocked and then came down with a crash. Immediately strange creatures began to run in every direction.

She saw the Mockservice Corporation trying hard to push his way under a rock to hide. The caterpillar was scurrying as fast as he could down one of the paths and he really scurried very well for a caterpillar. The cat that she had seen in the little house scampered up a tree as fast as he could.

And then she found that she had been sleeping all the time.

COUNTY RECEIVING $161,153 TALBOT RELIEF INSTALLMENT

U. S. SHIPPING SECOND LOAD OF FLOUR

Welfare Fund Helped By Advance Payments; Gains Expected in Family Drive

The mailman will bring a check for $161,153 for unemployment relief today, the amount being the December installment of Allegheny County's share of the $10,000,000 state relief provided in the Talbot bill.

Word that the check had been sent here by the State Treasurer at Harrisburg yesterday came to relief workers here together with the announcement that four more carloads of government donated flour, representing another shipment of Allegheny County's 600-ton quota, would arrive at the Arsenal warehouse today.

Meanwhile, advance payments on large subscriptions yesterday will enable the Welfare Fund to continue relief throughout the remainder of this month without borrowing funds. The advance subscriptions of $100,000 made up the shortage the fund was facing for April.

Considerable advances are expected to be made over the week-end in the Family-Help-Family campaign now being waged to help the 28,000 needy families in Allegheny County. So far there are 2,425 families provided for under the arrangement of $100 per family for three months, leaving 25,575 still to be cared for.

Today the Brass Rail Restaurant Corporation announced it would donate 10 per cent of its receipts Thursday to the fund. On the same day Bonnivanni's Sixth street restaurant will do the same.

SIX DIE IN FIRE SWEEPING TENEMENT

Parents, Twin Sons, 2 Other Children Victims, Many Rescued by N. Y. Firemen

International News Service

NEW YORK, April 16.—A spectacular fire in a Bronx tenement house today claimed the lives of six persons, four of them children.

Samuel Gabromil, 45, his wife Gussie, and their twin sons, Joseph and Jacob, both 12, were trapped by flames in their apartment and burned to death.

Edith Weinstein, 10, and her brother, Philip, 7, died from burns they received in the blaze after being taken to a hospital.

At first believed to have been of pyromanic origin, the fire was found, by investigation, to have started in the basement through spontaneous combustion in a pile of rope.

Hundreds watching the blaze were thrilled by heroic rescues when firemen, braving the fast-spreading flames, rapidly carried tenant after tenant down ladders run up against the building.

Raymond Domena, 35, who jumped from the window of his first-floor apartment, broke his ankle.

TEACHERS HEAR MRS. OWEN AT CONFERENCE

Congresswoman Upholds Feminine Invasion of Public Life as Duty

It wouldn't be a bad idea for Uncle Sam to have a wife to help him balance his budget, Ruth Bryan Owen, Congresswoman from Florida, smilingly told more than 4,000 school teachers and college professors at the general meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Education Conference yesterday in Syria Mosque. The conference closes today.

Qualifying her advice to Uncle Sam, Mrs. Owen said that every wife and mother knows how to balance a budget, and then proceeded to defend woman's place in public life. Admitting that a woman's place is in the home, she said:

"It always has been in the home. My home is a place where my children live, but I find that they don't stay within four walls.

"It would be useless for me to keep my house safe for my children if the community wasn't safe. We can't be good mothers unless we have some knowledge of the laws of our country."

Modern dress, motion pictures and pioneers were used by Mrs. Owen as subjects by which to develop her ideas of education.

She believes science and geography, at least, should be taught by motion pictures.

She believes that the best argument in favor of modern girls' dress are the old family albums.

And she doesn't believe in the "old fashion" patriotic addresses which declare everything is all right with America and leaves the young student no responsibility to make it better.

Dr. Francis B. Haas, president of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, spoke on the future policies of the association. Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of Pittsburgh schools, presided.

PLEA FOR FLOOD WALL RENEWED

The executive committee of the Flood Commission has decided to continue its efforts toward construction of a flood wall around the downtown triangle. The committee is headed by George S. Davison.

The flood wall project is separate from other plans for wharf improvement. It would consist of a solid wall built down to bed rock to prevent seepage and would be backed by a fill to add considerable area to the downtown district.

The cost of such a project extending from Smithfield street on the Monongahela River to Tenth street on the Allegheny River would amount to from $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 in the opinion of Charles M. Reppert, Chief City Engineer.

The City Transit Commission was to meet today for further consideration of its report on a downtown subway. An effort is being made to have the report ready for City Council Tuesday.

RUTH'S FLIGHT FROM N. Y. COSTS $2

Miss Nichols Lauds Diesel Powered Plane Economy And 'Great' County Port

Remarking that her flight from New York to Pittsburgh had only cost $2 for fuel with her oil-burning engine, Miss Ruth Nichols, Rye (N. Y.) society aviatrix, landed at Allegheny County Airport late yesterday on the first leg of a 3,000-mile flight touching many states. She was greeted by Carrick clubwomen. More than an hour late from battling strong winds, Miss Nichols decided to remain in Pittsburgh over night. She said:

"The trip was uneventful, but the going was a little choppy. I blew a cylinder head. There was no danger, but it slowed me down. The weather here in Pittsburgh is delightful. This is the first time I have landed on your new county airport. I think it is great."

Miss Nichols is on her way to attend a meeting of clubwomen in St. Louis. She will be back in Pittsburgh in two weeks she said, to add to her list of a million names in a nation-wide petition for the National Council of Women to send to foreign countries inviting delegates to the 1933 Chicago convention at the World fair.

Concerning the oil-burning Diesel engine in the Lockheed-Vega plane she was flying, Miss Nichols said:

"It is a very interesting engine. There is no danger of fire. It uses an amazingly small amount of fuel."

COURT CLEARS ATTORNEY

Judge Samuel H. Gardner has handed down an opinion in Criminal Court setting aside costs in a recent case which had been put on Attorney J. I. Simon by the jury and placing the costs on the county.

The case was that against Wasil Nowak, charged by Sophia Spokoff with perjury. The woman testified that she brought the action on advice of Attorney Simon.

In his opinion Judge Gardner said:

"There is no doubt the jury has the right to look beyond the record and determine who the real prosecutor is, and place the costs upon him. However, in this case, upon reviewing the testimony as a whole, we are not satisfied that Mr. Simon did more than act in his capacity as attorney and advise his client that she had a right to bring an action for perjury. We, therefore, do not believe the jury was justified in placing the costs of the prosecution upon J. I. Simon."

CADIZ, O., April 16—Ohio's mine troops were sitting on a keg of powder here today as strikers mobilized their forces at a score or more points throughout the southeastern part of the state for another mass demonstration at the Somers mine of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Monday.

Another death, the second in the three-day-old mine war, was chalked up yesterday with the finding of the body of Carl Nygen, of Hopedale, in a stripping pit of the Harmon Creek Coal Company.

Nygen, Coroner's physicians declared, died of heart failure superinduced by fright when a mob of strikers stormed the diggings, stoning workers and wrecking equipment.

With the posting of a Sheriff's proclamation in Harrison County last night, guardsmen were being groomed by their officers for threatened hostilities to break out anew Monday.

The proclamation issued by Sheriff Maurice Wooster here forbade the assembling or parking of automobiles within one mile of Harrison County's six principal mines.

RAWLINS, Wyo., April 16—(AP.)—A bullet wound he inflicted upon himself after slaying State Senator A. J. Rosier late yesterday caused the death of Thomas Lacey, Rawlins gambler.

Under present regulations every tag and every case must be accounted for up to its final disposition by the Traffic Court.

TIPPLE BURNS, 200 MADE IDLE

Two hundred miners who had been working three and four days a week were thrown out of employment today by a fire believed of incendiary origin that swept the tipple of the Lindley Coal Company near Horning last midnight. Three cars of coal were burned. The loss is estimated at $45,000 by Supt. W. A. McBride.

McBride said the origin was unknown, but that the company and fire marshal were making an investigation. The fire had made such headway when discovered by a watchman that when fire companies from Canonsburg and Houston arrived it was beyond saving. Reports were current that the tipple had been set afire.

Most of the men employed in the mine had been with the company for years and reside in the town. Last summer when the National Miners' Union was fostering a strike there were minor disorders but the mine continued to operate.

McBride said the tipple would be rebuilt within 30 days as the company is filling long-term contracts.

MAN SLASHED, WIFE HELD

Alberta Bobbie Bush, 21, was under bond today on a felonious cutting charge following the slashing of her husband, Philip, 26, in their home at 211 Goodrich street late yesterday. At first Mrs. Bush said her husband had been slashed by another woman but after being arrested and being assured her husband would recover, admitted she had cut him with a butcher knife, police said. She said the cutting occurred during a beer party.

Mrs. Bush took her husband to Allegheny General Hospital last night several hours after the cutting when she could not stop the flow of blood. Both were arrested.

Moratorium Looms Over 15 Shillings

STOGUMBER, Somerset, England, April 16.—(AP.)—A moratorium is feared because the parish council here got reckless and spent 15 shillings. Apart from the clerk's salary, which is about $20 a year, the council usually spends 2 shillings and 6 pence. But because of the extravagance this year the budget won't balance, and the clerk may not get his pay.

Miss Spang Wills Medical Research Fund, Aids Home

A perpetual trust fund for cancer research, also for general medical research, was left to the University of Pittsburgh Medical School by the will of Rosalie Spang, filed for probate late yesterday, disposing of a fortune believed to total about $2,000,000, created by her father through the Spang-Chalfant Steel Company.

The Home for Aged Protestant Women in Wilkinsburg is the chief beneficiary, dividing with the Pitt Medical School the residue of the estate and also receiving a trust fund of $200,000 in memory of Miss Spang and her parents, Charles Frederick and Sarah Ann Spang. Erection of a Spang wing to the institution was directed by the will.

A valuable collection of paintings and curios was left to Carnegie Museum, the collection including a painting by Franz Hals and two family portraits by Sully. Trinity Episcopal Cathedral of Pittsburgh, and the Episcopal Church of Nice, France, each were left $2,000.

The will created trust funds aggregating $1,150,000 for relatives, $300,000 each for nieces, Sarah Sang, Rosalie Kittinger and Mabel Spang Ancker; $150,000 for a great-niece, Katherine Kittinger, and $20,000 each, Loyd and Lawrence Kittinger and Frederick and Henry Sang, grandnephews, and Betty Sang, grandniece.

Miss Spang died Wednesday at 83, in Nice, France, where she lived, as she was preparing for her annual spring visit to this country. The Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, Robert Waldrop and Alfred Loyd were named executors.

Chicken Lacking on Family Menu, Boy, 6, Finds One

The "depression" to a West Homestead 6-year-old was interpreted in just one way—a scarcity of chicken dinners. He set out yesterday to remedy the situation.

Playing truant from school, he visited a neighbor's chicken yard, singled out a fat hen and with it clasped tightly against his breast, ran as fast as his sturdy little legs could carry him.

The hen was heavy, and the owner, attracted by the commotion in the chicken lot, overtook him. He retrieved the hen but the youngster wriggled free.

He summed up the situation later at the police station:

"Daddy ain't got no work for a long time. We ain't had no chicken for dinner for a long, long time."

He was turned over to his father, who intimated that a "woodshed drama" would be enacted.

CHINESE TEA GIVEN BY VOTERS

MISS JANE BOWMAN . . . GUEST AT MRS. OLIVER'S CHINESE TEA

Miss Bowman examining articles in Miss Mary Lang's exhibit at the George S. Oliver home, Ellsworth avenue, where Mrs. Oliver entertained with a Chinese tea to finance League of Women Voters' national convention delegates. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Delegates' Fund Benefits by Affair

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

Rich embroideries, rare carvings and some exquisite lacquer and porcelain ware were among many other articles in the valuable exhibit seen at the League of Women's Voters' Chinese tea yesterday, Mrs. George S. Oliver gave her home in Ellsworth avenue for the affair, which was a benefit for the league's delegate fund to the national convention in Detroit.

Mrs. A. H. Bowman, and her co-chairman, Mrs. Waldo Amos and Mrs. H. K. Griffin, as well as the young woman who served as aides wore lovely Chinese costumes, thus adding an extra bit of atmosphere.

Miss Mary Lang, Mrs. Clarke Hufover, Mrs. Adam Jacobs and Mrs. Judson Crane supplied the exhibit, Miss Lang's contribution including a large variety of things. There was one especially beautiful piece of carved white jade set in a 250-year-old frame of the Sung dynasty. Some of the stands upon which the articles were placed, Chinese-fashion, were carved from a solid piece of redwood. Painted scrolls, mother of pearl work, embroideries of all kinds, odd little wooden toys, and even some of the unusual Ku-su work were to be seen in this portion of the exhibit.

Also of interest was the program offered for the afternoon. Miss Lang spoke on the old arts of China—bronze, carving, embroidery, lacquer, weaving and tapestry, regretting that the modern Chinese art is losing much of its beauty by Occidental modification. Mrs. Edward O. Tabor, in a series of fetching costumes, sang folk songs of several countries including the Reginald Crist Chinese nursery rhymes and, to close, she read as a request number Milne's "The King's Breakfast."

Pittsburgh Male Chorus and Berenice Alaire
Carnegie Music Hall

PROGRAM

Battle Hymn (Rienzi)	Wagner
The Carnovale	Rossini
Has Sorrow Thy Young Days Shaded	Irish Folk Song
Possession	Clough-Leighter
Frau Nichtigall	Taubert
La Calandrina	Jernelli-Viardot
Lo! Here the Gentle Lark	Bishop
American Ode	Kountz
Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind	Parker
Rose, Softly Blooming	Spohr
Bell Song from "Lakme"	Delibes
The Sea Hath Its Pearls	Genet
Hallelujah Chorus (Mount of Olives)	Beethoven

The Pittsburgh Male Chorus sang its closing concert in Carnegie Music Hall last night, with Lee Hess Barnes conducting. He kept the singers in a breezy tempo during most of the program, and their tone was brighter than formerly. Deficiencies in diction often make their songs wearisome, as in Clough-Leighter's "Possession," but the general spirit of the concert was high.

Mr. Lissfelt

Much interest was added by the appearance of Bernice Alaire, coloratura soprano, a recent winner in radio concert, and a personality of no mean force. A charming young girl with a fresh and beautiful voice, and most naive manner, she showed us tremendous possibilities. Her high voice is not always secure, though more naturally stronger in high F than with the celebrated Lily Pons. Her middle register is fuller than with most coloratura singers, though there is still a break between middle and high voice, and a method of breathing that, if not immediately corrected, will wreck her voice. She has a sense of musical values and knows how to win her audience.

"The Cuckoo" of Liza Lehmann, "Everywhere I Look" of Molly Carew, "The Captain" of James Rogers were her encores.

Marianne Genet was honored by having her chorus "The Sea Hath Its Pearls" performed again. The composer was at the piano and helped towards a rousing climax which brought a repetition of the song.

Miss Genet has a strong lyric sense in her music and remains within bounds of a simple song form. This chorus is not overladen and one listens to it with pleasure.

Will A. Rhodes, Warren C. Kindler, and Edwin C. Hicks were soloists from the chorus, and Fred Lotz played excellent accompaniments.

—J. FRED LISSFELT.

CHIC HANDKNITTED SWEATERS FAVORED FOR SPRING WEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,

PARIS, April 16.—There's no doubt about the power of the knitting needle and the crochet hook to point the way to smartness, since the showing of the early spring clothing. For there isn't a house without its quota of handknit sweaters, caps and scarfs, all of them smart, yet all retaining that essential simplicity that should always characterize knitted things. Especially grand are the little sweater blouses that are worn either with suits or with separate skirts. Many women have ordered several models, and on viewing those on display it isn't at all surprising. There is such a tailor-made youthful look about these sweaters that is irresistible. They are absolutely different from the sweater of even a few seasons ago, but they are just as trig. Different colors and designs are used to embellish the garment, for monotony can so easily creep into the meshes of a knitted article, as the trimming is of necessity circumscribed in scope or appeal. Some designers are showing sweaters with matching little caps, splendid for early morning wear in town and for general country wear and really ideal for golf.

VERA BOREA is an Italian woman who is a recent recruit to the couture ranks here. She has scored a triumph through the originality of her designs and has specialized in simple clothes that manage to look different and yet remain true to their dedicated purpose. She has a lot of handknit sets in her early collection, of which the ensemble sketched is a typical example. The sweater-blouse is of white wool, crocheted in square open mesh. A deep yoke of blue and white wool worked in diagonal stripes is drawn into a loose knot at one side. The little cap is crocheted to match and has a rolled brim like the sweater yoke.

Burglars Now Must Smile for Their Pictures

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

New invention will photograph burglars.

Good grief! Do we have to take pictures of 'em, too?

Just when the burglaree is smacking you over the skull with a blackjack, the wife says:

"Hold that pose a minute, please."

The silhouette of a single crook will not clean up the situation in a country where we can photograph 'em in groups of a thousand.

What we require is a panorama of America from the Gulf to the Lakes and from Coney Island to Seal Rocks. Reading from left to right, every fifth man would be eligible to the benevolent home for incurable racketeers.

The ones who aren't in office are running away from the office. They got theirs.

We don't want pictures with our next election. What we require are thumbprints.

31ST WARD TRIO TO POST BONDS

Bonds of $2,500 were to be posted today or Monday by three men indicted by the grand jury late yesterday for alleged registration frauds in the Thirty-first Ward. If the men fail to appear, warrants will be issued for them.

The defendants are George Baquet, former Justice of the Peace in Hays Borough, now a part of the Thirty-first Ward, and Julius Bounnetti and Peter Cappola, city policemen. They were indicted for conspiracy to procure the unlawful registration of about 20 persons, accessory before the fact to unlawful registration and subornation to perjury.

The grand jury, in its presentment to the court, said it found there had been a definite plan to procure the illegal registrations by causing persons who had not paid taxes to go before the registration board and say they had lost their tax receipts. The jury said the latter persons were mere tools of the three men indicted, and assisted in arriving at indictments by appearing and telling the facts.

REAL BALANCED U. S. BUDGET HELD NEED

Business Man Would Be Appalled at Government System, Writer Declares

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
United News Service

NEW YORK, April 16.—Apart from the exigencies of politics, real balancing of the budget in a fundamental economic sense will necessitate a revival of income producing business activities.

When I appeared recently before the Mellon sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, I stressed the necessity of distinguishing in federal finances between capital expenditures such as public works and efficient operating expenses such as salaries for the military and civilian branches of the government. Failure to make this distinction is the basic reason for the accounting practices of business corporations.

Mr. Rukeyser

BALANCED BUDGET

An [illegible] Senator H. Slichter, [illegible] professor of economics [illegible] discusses the [illegible] balanced budget.

"Secretary Mills says: By a balanced budget we mean that the government will live within its income, that current receipts will be adequate to cover current expenditures and that borrowing will not be resorted to to pay the ordinary running expenses of the government.

"Let us accept this definition. But what are the ordinary running expenses of the government? Are new roads, new postoffices, improvements to rivers and harbors, irrigation dams? Even private business distinguishes between current expenses and capital investments. When it puts up a new building, that is not an operating expense; it is an investment, an addition to capital.

SYSTEM AT FAULT

"A private business manager would be appalled if he were told that he must count the cost of the new building as a current expense and must regard his company as incurring a deficit unless it could pay the entire cost of the new building out of revenues earned during the year of construction. He would regard any one who computed deficits in this manner as crazy. And yet this is precisely how the federal government computes its deficit. No distinction is made between current operating expenses and outlay for permanent improvements or additions to plant and equipment. New battleships, new tanks, new postoffices, new roads, all count as just so much current operating expense.

"By all means let us give the public the balanced budget that it desires—in the sense that all current expenses are paid out of current receipts."

PROGRAM NEEDED

In pointing to the deflationary consequences of the current tendency of the businessman to sit tight and wait, Dr. Slichter says:

"Unfortunately, by waiting for the drop to cease, business causes it to continue. Under these circumstances leadership in initiating a recovery is needed from the government. A public-construction program of a billion dollars would not in itself put more than one-eighth possibly only one-tenth of the unemployed back to work, but it is probably as large a program as could be satisfactorily managed on short notice. Its principal effects, however, would be indirect. By halting the drop in prices and by putting a little more profit into business, it would give many enterprises the courage to do some long term deferred spending. This in turn would gradually cause consumers to spend more rapidly, and the upward spiral would be started."

DU PONT EARNS 74c A SHARE

WILMINGTON, Del., April 16 (AP).—Earnings of E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and Company for the first quarter of 1932, according to preliminary figures, show 74 cents a share on 10,943,767 shares of common stock, the average number outstanding during the period.

This figure includes dividends from a General Motors investment amounting to 45 cents a share on Du Pont common. Earnings in the corresponding quarter of 1931 were $1.01 a share on 11,065,762 shares of common stock, the average number outstanding during that period. The figure for 1931 includes dividends from a General Motors investment amounting to 68 cents a share on Du Pont common.

Earnings for the quarter exclusive of income from General Motors were small and after deducting dividends paid on the debenture stock amounted to 24 cents a share on the common stock as against 33 cents a share for the same period last year.

Figures for both periods include the Du Pont Company's equity in undistributed profits of losses of controlled companies not consolidated.

Market Acts Tired—Acts As Though Help Needed

By Special News Service

NEW YORK, April 16.—The market acted a little tired at the close yesterday and seemed to be scheduling a fairly S. O. S. It needs a little helping hand now to keep the ball rolling for it is losing the impetus brought about by short covering in the last two days. Sentiment would be helped a lot too if American Telephone and some of the other leaders showed relief from pressure.

As it is Wall Street is pretty much on the fence on the immediate course of prices though traders are still wary about making new short commitments.

Some quarters are inclined to believe that the $9 rate of American Telephone will be declared at the next meeting even though net for the first quarter was only $2.07 a share. The unfavorable part of the report was the tapping of the subsidiaries to make the showing.

Liquidation of a block of 5,000 shares for Chicago account was responsible for the slump in U. S. Alcohol the other day. The cost of this stock originally was well over $100 a share.

Phelps Dodge is the stock Senator Smoot is said to have had in mind when he echoed Richard Whitney's idea about "Giving America Away."

The pencils got busy once this leaked out and all wondered where the Senator got the $40 in assets he mentioned behind the stock selling at $4.50.

There is some belief he may have been referring to Great Western Sugar, in which he is reported to be heavily interested.

Flare-up in Case Threshing looked as though some stop-loss orders were touched off. Case is likely to follow wheat up if there is a real play in the grain now, but so far interests close to the stock aren't doing anything. The surprising upturn in the copper stocks was largely due to advance information on Kennecott's report today showing net of 41 cents a share.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, April 16.—(AP)—Bank clearings so far in April continue to show quite as heavy loss as they did in both of the preceding months. The total this week for all leading cities in the United States, as reported to Dun's review, of $4,671,572,000 was 41.2 per cent below that of last year. At New York City, clearings were $3,131,333,000, a reduction of 43.6 per cent, while the total for the cities outside of New York of $1,540,239,000 was 35.7 per cent smaller.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES TO ADVANCE

Steel Rises Fractionally While Others Gain From Half to More Than Two

NEW YORK, April 16.—(AP.)—The stock market continued its recovery into its third consecutive session today.

Among issues rising about a point in the first half hour were Santa Fe, Goodyear, Case, Woolworth, Loose Wiles and American Tobacco, while issues advancing ½ or more included American Can, American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, International Harvester and New York Central.

Peoples Gas rose more than 2. United States Steel advanced a minor fraction. Auburn dropped nearly 2, then recovered partially. Trading was in small volume.

Market commentators again stressed the importance of Federal Reserve Bank efforts to pump more credit into play. The statement of Eugene Meyer that the reserve system does not embark on a new program one day and change it the next was interpreted as an assurance that the present campaign would be continued.

Meanwhile the importance of Washington legislation was again stressed. In some quarters the contention was advanced that the question of new tax rates is the most important single consideration now before business and finance. The weekly trade reviews tended to bear this out in a measure, their report showing that business was still in a waiting mood, with no important new developments reported.

In international banking quarters, growing study was being given to the June conferences at which a new effort will be made to arrive at some satisfactory formula for working out the interallied debt and reparations problems.

Germany's March export surplus over imports was accepted as encouraging insofar as that country's debt service payments are concerned, but decline of German imports to 1880 levels again attested the drastic nature of the measures taken to keep up the export surplus.

Sterling cables opened at $3.77¼, up ⅛, while French francs were unchanged with the cable rate at 3.94⅜ cents.

KEEPING WHEAT, SAYS MILNOR

LONDON, April 16.—George S. Milnor, president of the Grain Stabilization Corporation in the United States—states that the Farm Board is not trying to sell any wheat.

He said:

"I did not come to Europe to sell surplus wheat. I am here merely to visit our representatives. We do not want to sell any wheat and I have not tried to sell any inasmuch as the United States crop prospects are poor, indicating a smaller crop next year. Thus, we will be in a comfortable position, although we find most European countries need wheat, which we probably will sell from day to day."

DOLLAR STRAIN ABOUT OVER

NEW YORK, April 16.—The strain on the American dollar in foreign exchanges appears to be definitely ended and gradual improvement is looked for by leading authorities from now on unless unfavorable developments occur to drive capital from this country.

It was expected that considerable metal would be shipped to France on the steamship Mauretania, which sailed last night. Virtually all of the engagements, however, were cancelled prior to sailing time because of the improved position of the dollar. A small amount of gold will be sent to France on the LaFayette which sails today.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Discipline

You wanted it to be a game forever.
And though I played as cleverly as you,
The prospect of continuing to be clever
Indefinitely—as you'd have had us do—
Was pretty dreary. So I played to win,
Applying the traditional technique
Of "all or nothing"—and the discipline
Reacted negatively, so to speak . . . .

The menace of my pale possessiveness
Has been removed completely from your view,
While I've regained possession, none the less,
Of all of me that once belonged to you;

And neither of us knew, before it ended,
We would contrive to make defeat so splendid.

Jigger.

The Squelch Terrible

At a recent banquet dinner the other night the guest of honor was presented with a bust of himself. The sculptor of the bust was also on the dais. He just wasn't looking, that's to make a speech. The sculptor-host took advantage of it, however, and got up and talked, going into a windy and pompous discourse about himself.

After he sat down, without a hand, a bored wag cried:

"That makes two busts."

She Probably Will

Among other crown-talks offered by Nancy Carroll in an interview which asked Nancy why one bit ambition was to be like to be shot when I'm 90 by a jealous husband.

Rebuke

Then there's the one from the nimble witted Wilson Mizner, whose place in Hollywood is patronized by the movie well-knowns. Mizner instructed one of his waitresses to bring him a plate of soup and the lass was so nervous waiting on her boss she spilled it on his new suit.

"Good heavens!" thundered Wilson, "even a seal can juggle!"

As If You Didn't Know

Harmon Bone observes that a gag used to be something you put in a person's mouth. Now it's something a comedian takes out of another comedian's mouth.

Salve

Observed in the program at a local playhouse, from the pen of a well known commentator:

"I sometimes think he—the producer—purposely fashions an occasional flop show in order to follow it up with a smashing success merely to confound his critics. He has that sort of a sense of humor."

Oh, sure!

Add Similes

Bob Quirk's: As numerous as the broad A's at a Hollywood premiere.

Novelette

One of the better tales from the May Allison mansion concerns Jackie Cooper. When they were making "The Champ," Jackie it appears was having one of his off days. He just wouldn't cry. Director King Vidor was desperate. He pleaded with the young star to open his tear ducts, but it was futile.

"I'm trying," said Jackie, "but I don't feel like crying. I'm sorry, Mr. Vidor."

The director gave up and turning to his assistant asked him to do what he could about it. The assistant waited a few minutes and then walked over to little Cooper and patting him affectionately on the shoulder said:

"Jackie, Mr. Vidor is quitting this picture and he's going to tell the boss that you are a rotten actor."

That did it! Jackie broke down and wept real tears. And that's the scene on the observation car platform that jerks at your heart.

Tee-Hee

One of the more diverting articles in the tickled rags is

High Hat!

There's nothing "high hat" about George Cohen Sidney except his garb. Mr. Sidney, now in person in the Penn, is to appear in the National Variety Artists benefit show in that theater tomorrow midnight.

from Frank Ward O'Malley's typewriter. The crack newspaperman's theme is that parents should not worry if their tots flop at school, for many of the lads and lassies who scored via the sweet-break route include: Sam Clemens, Doug Fairbanks, Rachel Lindsay, Henry Ford, George M. Cohen, Andrew Jackson, Franklin P. Adams, O. O. McIntyre, Jack Barrymore, Al Smith, Bet-a-Million Gates, Texas Guinan, Rudyard Kipling and Charles Dickens.

O'Malley's success one presumes comes from the fact that he didn't graduate from Notre Dame where a student manager of the football team is lost every game.

First-Night

It was overheard between curtains for the other premiere performance. The press agent, anxious to learn what one critic thought of the performance accosted one of his lobby spies.

"What does he think of the show?" asked the exploiter.

"I don't think he has formed an opinion," was the snapper. "He hasn't heard any one discuss it yet."

Broadway Love

Almost a year ago a chorus girl married a film salesman, unpopular around the town. An admirer of the gal who had been opposed to the wedding, tore a $1,000 bill in two handing her one half. "I'm so sure," he said, "that you won't be with him in a year from now that I'll give you the other part of this if you are."

She was telling the story to a girl friend and remarked that she fought with her husband incessantly and was very miserable.

"He gave me this cut on my nose last week," she said, "but I'll stick it out for another seven weeks or die."

"You amaze me," he said. "Why do you stick that way if he slugs you?"

"What's seven weeks?" was the indifferent reply. "With that other $500 I'll be able to get a divorce and a new coat!"

Hehehch

They erred at Jo Bert Kalmar, one of the lads who cracked in Hollywood. At a premiere performance out there a drunk, sitting in the next pew, nudged Kalmar and hiccoughed:

"Whoosh that very important looking guy over there?"

"That happens to be Boleslavsky," obliged Kalmar.

"Here here," scolded the stew. "I asked a civil question—and I expect a civil answer!"

Free Tea Room Owner Of Dry Law Charge

Fred Jeske, proprietor of the Tampa tea room in Washington road, Mt. Lebanon was free today of violating the Snyder act. He was acquitted in Criminal Court before Visiting Judge Charles D. Copeland of Greensburg. His wife also was acquitted.

They were arrested by Mt. Lebanon police January 16. Police produced what they said was liquor seized in the place, but the Jeskes offered witnesses who said they had never known liquor to be sold there. Their attorney, Louis Little, charged that the evidence had been planted.

George Sidney Makes Hit In Penn

By GEORGE SEIBEL

By all odds the best of the screen stars who have appeared in person this season is George Sidney, who made thousands laugh at the Penn Theater yesterday. Not only has he rich natural and happy humor, but his act is very ingenious and never coarse. He is well worth seeing, and so is the rest of the stage show, especially those comical acrobats Terrell and Fawcett, and a dog circus that introduces some remarkable canine comedians. Six cornet players do the Sextet from "Lucia" with spirit. Harry Hoelle's orchestra gives numbers from Princess Maritza ingratiatingly and the Chester Hale Girls were costumed picturesquely for their drills and dances. A very refreshing stage show from first to last.

Robert Montgomery is the star in the picture. But the Flesh Is Weak," which is old stuff. He is one of the Gold Dust Twins in the flappers' heaven, Clark Gable being the other. In this picture he is supposed to do some wonderful love-making. He follows his fair lady wherever she goes telling her he adores her and behaving like an insane cad. In real life he would get thrown down a staircase after five minutes of this sort of love-making. In Hollywood she listens to him and finally goes off with him supposedly to the altar. He has a father too, who loses 4,500 pounds at the club, writes a worthless check and is saved from suicide by Robert's offering to marry a rich and generous lady of the British aristocracy. The British aristocracy talks about "cold feet" and "brass tacks" just as if they were ordinary American creatures. Some good comedy acting enlivens the picture, but most of it is impossible except to the most romantic admirer of Hollywood Romeos.

Far-Off Lands In the Davis

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"Explorers of the World," an entertaining and educational picture of far-flung frontiers opened yesterday in the Davis. It spreads before audiences five separate expeditions into the world's most adventurous spots, under the leadership of famous explorers. And one thing is sure, it is authentic stuff.

Harold McCracken leads the parade into the Far North. And besides being in the film he appears in person and lets you in on the secret that most explorers' thrilling and hairbreath escapes are due to their own mistakes.

Gene Lamb continues the screen adventures with a trip into China and Tibet, and many are the strange sights to be seen. Harold Noice braves the wild Amazon territory. The Antarctic and Africa also are invaded, and other explorers you have a movie meeting with are J. R. Stenhouse and Dr. Lawrence M. Gould.

Benefit Show Sunday

In addition to the combined stage shows of the Penn and Stanley Theaters, the Sunday midnight show in the Penn for the benefit of the N. V. A. sanatorium at Saranac, N. Y., will offer the entire program of the Nixon Restaurant. Joe Wallace, master of ceremonies, will put on his entire troupe headed by Marguerite and Leroy, dancers and Signor Angelo DePalma, tenor.

Wallace will alternate with George Sidney and Dick Powell as master of ceremonies in introducing the various acts. In addition, he will offer a routine of his own specialties, including impressions of Ted Lewis and Fisko.

Tickets are now on sale at the box-offices of both the Penn and Stanley Theaters. The admission price is $1, and all seats are reserved.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., April 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

A small, good-natured, likable Negro died last week in Oklahoma—name Bill Pickett. Don't mean a thing to you, does it? Well, he was the originator of a stunt that has thrilled millions. It was the rodeo stunt of "bulldogging." When they arrest a cowboy for cruelty to animals in bulldogging, they arrest the wrong participant. More men get hurt than steers. He worked with white cowboys all his life and never had an argument or an enemy, even the steers wouldn't hurt old Bill.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

Sweepstakes!

THE IDEA for this column hit me last night as I was sitting in a restaurant with a group of the boys. For some reason or other the discussion turned to lotteries and sweepstakes. One of the gentlemen at the table happened to be connected with the Army and Navy Sweepstakes, which is conducted annually for the benefit of the Canadian war veterans. And before he was through talking I had enough material for several columns.

The subject interested me because I've always been a sucker for pools and drawings of any nature. Ever since I was old enough to carry money I've been investing sums from 10 cents to $5 to win anything from a hot water bottle to an automobile. The fact that I never won anything, and will probably cash in without winning anything, has nothing to do with the case.

The closest I ever came to a winner in one of these things was when I traveled to Bermuda a couple of years ago with the Dougherty family. That Brooklyn family if you remember your newspaper stories, consisted of Eddie and Danny and dad. Eddie had purchased a dollar ticket in the aforementioned Canadian Sweepstakes. And when his horse had run first in the English Derby, the Dougherty family had collected $149,000.06.

As you undoubtedly do not remember, I did a story about them at the time. You never met three happier people than Eddie and Danny and Dad. They had never enjoyed much luxury before, and now they were living to the hilt. I enjoyed their company and I enjoyed their philosophies. As a matter of fact I received one of the greatest kicks of my life when I spoke to Eddie one morning.

"Tell me something, Eddie," I said. "They're selling tickets now for next year's Canadian Sweepstakes. Are you going to buy a ticket?"

The young man who had just won almost $150,000 never blinked an eye.

"I should say not," he replied very seriously. "What do you think I am, a sucker?"

Both the Canadian and the Irish Sweepstakes are drawn under government supervision, the former being held at St. John's, Newfoundland, and the latter at Dublin, Ireland.

The United States government annually makes an earnest effort to stop the sale of chances in this country. The Postoffice Department attempts to co-operate in every way, even going so far as to invoke a law that was passed some 50 years ago specifically to hinder the Louisiana lottery. But when people want to gamble there doesn't seem to be much use in defying them. Almost $1,000,000 in tickets alone on the Canadian sweepstakes were sold within a radius of 50 miles of New York City last year.

Stories about the winners in these gigantic gambles are many and varied. There is a superstition, you know, that disaster must follow those who win great sums in such fashion. But that seems to appeal rather than frighten. Because each buyer says to himself: "If I win I'll be different." Yes, indeed.

Here are a couple of winning yarns that may interest you. Out in Detroit a few years back, a poker game was in session. It was a small game, but one of the players went broke in short order. In his wallet he carried two tickets on the Canadian sweepstakes and he offered to let them both go for $1 in cash. His offer was refused. A week later, one of the tickets won $3,000.

Another one concerns a bird who had never gambled at anything in his life. He finally invested a lonesome buck in one of these lotteries and drew down a large prize. He immediately quit his job, moved into a hotel suite and began to play the ponies with a vengeance. Gambling, he insisted, was his vocation and he had never known it until then. Within a month he was broke. He couldn't get his job back because of his gambling reputation. And I think he died a suicide.

Then there was the gentleman who won something like $70,000 when Forbra won the Grand National. After the proper lapse, the dough was counted out to him in bills, gold, silver and copper cents. The money had been carefully counted before it was brought to his house, but the winner insisted that there was something wrong. He asserted that there was a penny missing.

So the entire amount was gone over once again. He watched everything with eager eyes and, when it was completed, it was discovered that the sum was not a penny short, but 10 cents over. The winner was in 9 cents—and he never said a word about paying it back!

I could go on indefinitely. But I think I'll quit with the actual case of the Hindu manservant who hit the Calcutta sweepstakes one year and came into more than half a million dollars. He immediately saw a heavenly hand in the transaction, so he became the angel of a new religious sect that he thought up all by his lonesome.

He found some followers and built a magnificent temple. When the temple was completed, all his money was gone—and so were his followers. So he now begs alms from passengers on the Indian railways. And hopes, probably, for another big winning so that he can get more followers.

Being highly interested in the subject, as you can readily see, I asked the gentleman who knows what the United States might realize if it ever went in for the supervision of lotteries. He smiled.

"Our government being as hypocritical as it is," he asserted, "the thought is, of course, ridiculous. But I'll be happy to answer your question.

"At a dollar a chance and with no opportunity for trickery of any sort, the government would probably take in from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 on any sporting event it chose to cast in lottery form. Operating expenses would run to approximately 20 per cent. Apportioning the prize money on a reasonable scale, I should say the government would realize some $20,000,000 on each lottery.

"At $2 a chance the money would naturally double. Running for of these a year and with tickets sold all over the world, the government would easily take in $150,000,000 for tax relief, unemployment, or anything you might wish to name.

The gentleman was more than right. Our government would shudder in horror at the very thought. And all this in spite of Wall Street, which is a far greater lottery than all the Sweepstakes put together.

The idea amuses me, however. If it ever did come to pass, I can see just what would happen. The government would immediately vote the $150,000,000 in lottery profits to the better enforcement of prohibition. And the agents would immediately spend the money to buy chances in the next lottery!

Racers Speed In Warner

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

More thrills of the automobile race track than are to be found at a real speed contest of cars manned by noted drivers are contained in the film, "The Crowd Roars," in which the drivers are not the famous daredevils of the racing game but actors. "The Crowd Roars" is in the Warner with James Cagney featured as a hard, nervy, brainy operator of fast cars, famed for his courage and ability to find his way between and around other speeding machines and come in first with his own.

Most of the action takes place in two races, one at a track in California, the other being the big national race at Indianapolis with authentic track scenes interwoven to make the staged ones seem the more real, and they do appear to be all that. Wrecks and fires and cars hurtling into the air are shown, with atmospheric close-ups of the contestants driving at lightning speed, the frenzy of victory's lure shining in their eyes.

There is romance, too. In fact a couple of romances, one between Cagney and Ann Dvorak and the other concerned with Joan Blondell and Eric Linden, the latter in the role of Cagney's "kid" brother. It becomes a case brother against brother, when Cagney interferes to save his brother from a siren and they race against each other as enemies. That status is not changed until Cagney, by a turn of fortune's wheel, is put into position to make a heroic reconciliation at the Indianapolis race.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Hay Fever" will be seen in the Alvin only for a brief engagement (one week, box opening tomorrow). Laurette Taylor, substitute for Constance Collier, is featured. "Hay Fever" is a comedy by Noel Coward, and it is presented as the final play in the subscription series sponsored by the Professional Players of Pittsburgh.

Monday night the Nixon will throw open its doors for a week of college theatricals, the attraction being the twenty-fifth annual production of the Cap and Gown Club, dramatic organization of the University of Pittsburgh. It is a musical comedy, "The Silver Domino," the action of which is spread through 18 scenes comprising two acts. The opening performance will be sponsored by the Civic Club of Allegheny County.

In another column is an announcement of a benefit show to be held Sunday midnight in the Penn, the proceeds of which will be used for ill and disabled actors of the vaudeville stage who are patients in the N. V. A. Sanatorium at Saranac, N. Y. The actor, you know, is always called upon to give his services when local benefits are held, and this is an opportunity to repay him in part for his many willing contributions to similar events for the benefit of others.

'Jafsie' Seen In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

The first pictures ever shown on the screen of Dr. J. F. Condon, retired New York public school principal, who under the pseudonym of "Jafsie," acted as intermediary between Col. Lindbergh and his baby's kidnapers, is contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, being seen in both the Penn and Fulton theaters. The pictures were taken while Dr. Condon was head of Public School No. 12, in the Bronx. There are also pictures bearing on the Lindbergh kidnaping from Berlin. The pictures are accompanied by explanatory talks by the Globe Trotter.

Striking pictures show women "wets" in Washington for the conference of the National Prohibition Reform, with Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, of New York, heading a group of delegates from 41 states. Mrs. Sabin declares the members have pledged themselves to support only a candidate for President who will work to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment. Miss Phyllis Thompson, of New York, speaking for society "debs," declares that bootlegging must be stamped out.

VOLCANO IN REEL

Scenes from the volcanic region of South America, where thousands of lives and much property have been endangered by the violent eruptions which have blanketed thousands of square miles of territory with dust and ashes, are shown. The forbidding volcano of Descabozado, center of the Andean group in eruption, is seen throwing red-hot rocks into the air.

Cavalrymen at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, with their mounts, are put through a number of thrilling riding tests.

At Winterhaven, Fla., a new and novel race is held. Aquaplanes with outboard motors attached are built to resemble Roman chariots, with their riders costumed in togas.

PIRATE OPENER

Australia's open-air swimming season closes at Melbourne with a spectacular three-mile race on the River Yarra between 500 men and girl contestants.

The World Champion Cardinals start off their season by trouncing the Pittsburgh Pirates, 10-2, in their 1932 curtain raiser at Sportsmen's Park, St. Louis. The high lights of the game are shown.

Benefit Star

Pola Negri, appearing in person in the Stanley, will be one of the features in the benefit show of the National Variety Artists in the Penn tomorrow midnight.

Mr. Powell Sings His Goodbye

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Auf wiedersehn" sings Dick Powell in the Stanley. And right back at him we shout: "Auf wiedersehn" and all the luck in the world."

Mr. Powell's farewell show, he's off to Hollywood, you know—opened yesterday. And it is a gay and happy display, with Mr. Powell being at his best.

Pola Negri, the glamorous one from the Silents, sweeps down a stairway into some dramatic stuff, and gets a handsome welcome. Harry Savoy, almost as loony as Joe Penner, demonstrates he can be a Barrymore also, and gets serious with the Mad Scene from "Henry III." The chorus girls do some individual showing off, with Helene Ward stepping out and nicely singing "I Love You." And there are other amusing entertainers.

The show ends, amid applauding goodbyes, with Mr. Powell riding away on a choo-choo. Later, some of the folks take teacups in hand and drink him a farewell toast on the mezzanine floor. We didn't stop. We guess we're old-fashioned!

The screen hands out the comedy with "Sky Devils" flying high, wide and not so handsome Spencer Tracy and George Cooper start out as a couple of life guards, who can't swim, and land in the artillery. Then, when they find it isn't a one-horse army, they desert. But the poor gobs stow away on a transport and land in the flying corps. The supporting cast includes Ann Dvorak and William (Stage) Boyd.

The picture is after the laughs and it gets them.

Free Tea Room Owner Of Dry Law Charge

Fred Jeske, proprietor of the Tampa tea room in Washington road, Mt. Lebanon, was free today of violating the Snyder act. He was acquitted in Criminal Court before Visiting Judge Charles D. Copeland of Greensburg. His wife also was acquitted.

They were arrested by Mt. Lebanon police January 16. Police produced what they said was liquor seized in the place, but the Jeskes offered witnesses who said they had never known liquor to be sold there. Their attorney, Louis Little, charged that the evidence had been planted.

BUCS SHOW ENCOURAGING QUALITIES

AN EVEN BREAK in the opening four-game series against the champions of the world on their own grounds can be called a pretty fair start without any stretch of the imagination. And the success of the Pirates in coming out of St. Louis with an even break to their credit was all the more gratifying to local fans because the Bucs did the trick by grabbing the last two games after being soundly thrashed in the first encounter, and kicking away a four-run lead in the second.

Ervin Brame

It takes more than playing ability to square so tough a series following such a disheartening start. It takes gameness, determination and fighting spirit, and the fact that the Rovers showed those qualities when many a club would have folded up brightens not a little their outlook for the year. Time will smooth out the playing edges that are now a bit rough, and meanwhile it's encouraging to know that the club has heart. Time could not supply that if it were lacking.

ANOTHER SOURCE OF gratification is the evidence given by Ervin Brame, in saving the final game of the St. Louis engagement after the rout of Bill Swift and allowing only one run in five innings, that he is in shape to do his share of the pitching in the early contests.

An illness or injury jinx usually has deprived the Bucs of Brame's services during the first part of the season, and his ability to take his turn from the start this year is a helpful item while Heinie Meine is missing and Remy Kremer is out from the effects of grip.

INCIDENTALLY, THIS IS the first victory that has been credited to Brame over the Cardinals in almost two years. He appeared against them only once last season, starting the game of May 28 at St. Louis and being lifted after the second inning.

The big Kentuckian's last win over the Redbirds prior to yesterday was scored at Forbes Field on July 30, 1930, when he took a 6-to-5 decision over Jess Haines. For the whole time of his activities against the Cards since he entered the league in 1928, however, Brame has a wide margin in his favor, having beaten them nine times while losing to them on only four occasions.

CONSIDERING THE UNFAVORABLE weather conditions, the pitching in the first week of the major league season has been surprisingly good in the main, with the American League hurlers doing the better work. In the first three games against Boston, Alvin Crowder and Monte Weaver shut the Red Sox out twice. Sam Gray, of the Browns, let the White Sox down without a run. One game of three hits, two games of four hits and one of five hits have already been pitched. The reorganized Reds had been tipped to start off with some tall slugging, but in four games against the Cub flingers they made only 14 runs and 36 hits for a club average of just .265.

Walter Roettger

OUTFIELDER WALTER ROETTGER does more shifting around than any other player in the major baseball leagues. Within the short span of two years he has changed clubs no fewer than four times since completing the 1929 season with the Cardinals.

On April 10, 1930, the Cards traded Roettger to the Giants for Eddie Farrell and George Fischer. On October 29, of the same year, the Giants sold him to the Reds. On June 15, 1931, the Reds swapped him to the Cards for Taylor Douthit, and last December 12 the St. Louis club sold him back to Cincinnati.

AND NOW THERE are signs that Walter soon may move on again. At least he is known to be on the market, for when the Cub management this week expressed a desire to dicker for Babe Herman or Chick Hafey the Red officials said they would not part with either of these players, but would be willing to make a deal for one or more of their other gardeners, including Roettger.

"But we want only Hafey or Herman," says President Bill Veeck, of the Cubs. "We are not interested in those other fellows, Roettger, Douthit and Crabtree, unless, of course, they want to give them to us without weakening our club. There is absolutely no truth in reports that we would send away Pat Malone or any one else we can use. And we have no interest in any but outstanding players."

IF YOU THOUGHT the passing of another year had finally halted the marathon running activities of Clarence Harrison De Mar, you didn't know the old gentleman. Clarence continues to be the age marvel of the footracing game. The marathon grind of 26 miles 385 yards is too much for even the average rugged young fellow, but to De Mar, with his forty-second birthday anniversary behind him, it's only light exercise. He has just sent in a belated entry for the annual American Marathon, to be run in Boston next Tuesday, Patriots' Day, and will, as usual, be among the starters in the big event which he has featured for so long that it couldn't be considered complete without him.

DE MAR NEVER HAS finished worse than ninth in the Boston race which celebrates on foot what Paul Revere did on a horse. He has won the contest seven times, a record which no other runner is likely to equal in this generation, if in any. He won for the first time in 1911, came back after 11 years with three victories in a row in 1922, 1923 and 1924, and was first again in 1927, 1928 and 1930.

In his initial appearance in the race in 1910 he finished second. He was third in 1911, second in 1925, third in 1926, ninth in 1929 and fifth last year. He has run 50 marathons and won 20 of them. He won a 44-mile race in 1928 in 5:41:33, a record. Clarence's one big ambition is to win the Olympic marathon and he hopes to take the first step toward that goal by showing his heels to a field of much more youthful rivals on Tuesday.

RACING FOLLOWERS WILL await with much interest the outcome of the Harford Handicap, featuring the opening of the Havre de Grace meeting today, as throwing additional light on the question as to whether or not Cornelius V. Whitney's Equipoise can make a successful comeback this year.

Cornelius V. Whitney

The first evidence was all in favor of the horse. He beat Hygro by half a length at Bowie the other day, and, with an impost of 126 pounds, set a new track record of 59 2-5 seconds for five furlongs.

IF THE PERFORMANCE of Equipoise today, carrying 128 pounds, is in keeping with that first showing, there will be little doubt that the dark chestnut son of Pennant and Swinging is going to be a big factor in the important handicaps of 1932. It will mark the return to form of a horse that a year ago was one of the most talked about thoroughbreds in the country. He had topped the 2-year-olds in 1930 by winning $156,835 with eight firsts, five seconds and one third in 17 starts. He was favorite in the future books for the 1931 Kentucky Derby and looked like the horse of the year. But then he developed an ailment that affected his form, and after he had gone down to defeat in the Chesapeake Stakes and the Preakness he was sent into retirement for 11 months. The Whitney star is now back, bigger and stronger than ever, and if his early work may be taken as an indication of his real form for 1932 there is some stiff competition in store for Twenty Grand, Mate, Jamestown, Questionnaire and the other topnotchers.

LYCEUM BOXERS CONTINUE TO SHOW CLASS

By JESS CARVER

The first annual American Legion Golden Glove amateur boxing tournament, which has been in session in the Moose Temple since Thursday night, will be brought to a fine conclusion tonight as the boys battle through the semi-final and final rounds in all weights, a card of 21 bouts being assured. The simon-pures punched through another 28-bout program last night. Six knockouts enlivened the proceedings.

Pittsburgh Lyceum punchers are certain to dominate tonight's finals. Eight of the Ryan-Gallagher glovemen have won their way into the semi-finals. The Lyceum has a chance for four championships, and is assured of one, for in the 118-pound class, all four semi-finalists are Lyceum boys.

FANS IN UPROAR

The fans had their inning last night as they gave the judges a ride or two when the verdicts of the officials failed to meet with the approval of the spectators. Action was held up for fully 10 minutes late in the evening when the boys thought the judges had kicked the decision in the Joe Mazur-Milo Poperio tussle in the 160-pound class. Mazur, a St. Mathias Lyceum middleweight, was awarded the decision.

General Burrows, Ambridge Negro 147-pounder, who looks better every time he goes to the post, recorded his second knockout in as many starts in the tourney by finishing Nick Robb, of the Valley View A. C., in the first round. Burrows clipped Robb with a right chop square on the whiskers soon after the fracas started, and Robb took a nine count. He got up and threw a couple wild left hooks, but Burrows stepped inside and whammed him again on the chin. Robb took another rest while Referee Simon Carlson tolled nine and got back to his feet, only to take a solid smash to the body that tipped him off that he was through for the night.

Bernard Speigle, of Pitt, who won a one-punch, one-round knockout win the opening night, was himself the victim of ol' Kid Kayo last night. He took such a lacing from Johnny Birek, of the Lyceum, in the first and second rounds that Referee Carlson wisely halted the proceedings and escorted Speigle to his chair.

ELEY WINS PAIR

William Eley, of the Pleasant Valley A. C., punched two opponents dizzy, but failed to get over a knockout wallop. He rules a favorite in the 126-pound class. His punching is hard and clean.

In a rousing 147-pound bout,

LEHMAN SCORES GOLF WIN

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., April 16.—(AP.)—Everett G. Livesay, southpaw veteran from Columbus, O., yesterday won the Mason and Dixon golf tournament by defeating John F. Hines, of Garden City, N. Y., 6 and 4, in the 36-hole final round.

Livesay, although outdriven by his younger opponent, displayed a steadier game, especially around the greens. Hines was in trouble with his irons and missed short putts at critical stages of the match.

In the second division, Chester Lehman, of Pittsburgh, defeated Earl F. Johnson, of Detroit, 1 up. In the consolation final, J. S. Knight, Akron, O., defeated Paul E. Levitan, New York, 4 and 3.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE SOAP THAT GROWS ON TREES—The Soap Tree (Sapindus saponaria), which grows in the Southern United States, is usually from 30 to 40 feet in height. The pulpy fruit, which contains saponarium, makes a frothy mixture when combined with hot water and can be used as a substitute for soap in the laundering of linens and other textiles. The seeds of the fruits formerly were used as buttons. I saw the Sapindus berry used as soap during my stay in Algiers last year. A MOST MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH—In January, 1931, while flying over Surrey, England, at a high altitude, the motor of Flight Lieut. H. M. A. Day's plane froze, precipitating the machine 20,000 feet to the ground. Death seemed inevitable, but, by some extraordinary trick of Fate bordering upon the miraculous, the flier escaped uninjured when he emerged to survey the ruins of his ship.

MAX MAY DRAW N. B. A. BAN

CHICAGO, April 16.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling, world heavyweight champion, may be barred from appearing in the 30 states under control of the National Boxing Association as a result of an investigation started by President John V. Clinnin.

The German boxer is on an exhibition tour.

George Panka, Pittsburgh heavyweight, complained to Gen. Clinnin over the use of his name in connection with an exhibition bout in Toronto, Ont., April 11. Dispatches credited Schmeling with giving Panka a severe beating, whereas Panka claims he was in Pittsburgh that night.

Gen. Clinnin said if a substitution was made, for the purpose of misleading the public, the N. B. A. would take steps to keep Schmeling out of its territory.

FORTRESS MONROE, Va., April 16.—(AP.)—Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion of the world, refused to go on with a scheduled exhibition sparring match at the Liberty Theater here last night, and some 500 fans who had assembled were refunded their money.

The champion refused to come into the theater when he heard of the light attendance.

Law Bans Bookies At Maryland Race

BALTIMORE, April 16.—(AP.)—Baltimore County officers have received orders from the County Commissioners to permit no bookmakers to operate today at the twenty-fourth running of Mt. Ledy's Manor, first of the three major events of the Maryland cross country racing season.

Followers of society racing said it was the first time in the history of the cross-country classics that an embargo had been placed on bookmaking.

M.A. PROSPECTS UNSETTLED

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., April 16.—(AP.)—Still undecided whether to operate a six or eight-club loop, Mid-Atlantic League moguls adjourned their third meeting of the year and plan another confab here probably next Tuesday.

Six clubs definitely are ready to begin the race. They are Charleston, Beckley, Huntington, Clarksburg, Johnstown and Cumberland.

Zanesville, O., represented by a committee of prominent citizens, announced it is ready to take over Joe Cambria's Youngstown franchise if he will supply the players and run the club. Cambria said he would shift his interests if Wheeling could be brought into the league.

With this in mind and the fact that the St. Louis Cards, the New York Giants or the Brooklyn Dodgers still may buy the Wheeling franchise, the club owners deemed it best to meet again to decide definitely whether to run with six or eight clubs.

A schedule also will be submitted at the forthcoming meeting.

Hogan, Manager On Outs Over Star's Weight

NEW YORK, April 16.—(AP.)—Frank (Shanty) Hogan, burly catcher of the New York Giants, is in John McGraw's bad graces again.

McGraw won't permit Hogan to catch until he gets down to 228 pounds. He scales 233 now and thus is in the position of being virtually suspended, although he must report to the ball park every morning and run around like a marathon athlete.

GRAYS, DETROIT PLAY TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

A game between two crack Negro teams, the Homestead Grays and the Detroit outfit of the East-West League, at Forbes Field at 3 o'clock this afternoon will usher in the local sandlot baseball season.

A few former Grays are in the Detroit lineup and the Grays include some new players on their team.

Workouts are scheduled today for the Homewood, North Siders, Edgewood, Swissvale and Reliance Life teams.

Manager Pat Griffin, of the Soho Midgets, announced today that Bill (Hooks) Jerdan will assist George McFarland in whipping the McKnights into shape for the West Penn League race. The squad will work out at Moultrie Park tomorrow afternoon. At Locust Grove, Manager Jack Fertig will have the Homestead Aces getting prepared for another hectic season.

Maxie Strub Stops Mosher in Seventh

ERIE, Pa., April 16.—(AP.)—Maxie Strub, of Erie, knocked out Orie Mosher, of Muskegon, Mich., in the seventh round of a scheduled 10-round bout last night.

Strub had difficulty solving the Michigan boy's freakish defensive tactics, but he hooked over a left to the midsection early in the seventh and Mosher stayed down. Strub weighed 138, Mosher 137½.

Joe Trippe, 143, of Rochester, N. Y., outpointed Charley Champness, 145, of Cleveland, in eight rounds. Johnny Zack, 133, of Erie, scored a technical knockout over Ernie Schwarz, 134, of Cleveland, in the third round of a scheduled six-rounder. Eddie Pinoszewski, 118, of Erie, took a decision from Mike Anpolik, 152, of Erie, in a four-round bout.

BUCCOS DOWN CARDINALS IN FINAL, 9-7

CINCINNATI, April 16.—Elated, and justly so, over their showing in the opening series of the campaign with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Pittsburgh Pirates prepared today to take on the Cincinnati Reds, sneaky peaky foemen of the Bucs. Steve Swetonic is due to go to the mound for the Pirates. The selection of Manager Hughey remains in doubt.

Yesterday, the Pittsburghers put on a nifty display of diamond pyrotechnics, in the fourth inning of the final game in St. Louis and when the smoke of battle cleared, the Freebooters had seven big runs and the old ball game. The final score favored the Pittsburghers by 9 to 7 and gave them an even break in the four-game series.

BIG INNING ENOUGH

The action was comparatively tame up until the advent of the fourth. Bill Swift was tossing 'em for the Bucs and Sylvester Johnson for the Cards. The Pirates were a run behind the Cards, having scored a pair in the second and the Bucs one in the third.

Capt. Pie Traynor opened the big inning by driving the ball into center for a single. Gus Suhr was good for a station hit through short and Pie was safe when Sparky Adams threw low and wide after fielding the hopper. Thevenow pulled a single past shortstop, Traynor counting and then Grace singled to center and Suhr and Piet galloped across.

Grace's blow was the signal for Johnson to file for the showers and Jim Lindsey took his place on the slab. He tossed out Swift, but Lloyd Waner singled and Thevenow and Grace scored. Brother Paul completed the act with a rousing triple that scored his brother and after Comorosky lofted to Watkins, Paul scored. Traynor fanned on his second trip to the plate.

The Cards refused to quit trying and put on a show of their own in the fifth that looked bad for a while, but the Pirates got them out after only four runs had been scored.

COLLINS HITS HOMER

Both teams scored in the ninth, the Cardinal run being personally accounted for by Jim Collins, who helped himself to his second home run of the year.

The 14-hit attack of the Buccaneers was led by Lloyd Waner, who collected three safe blows. Traynor, Thevenow and Grace had two each. The Cards garnered 15 hits, one more than their more successful foemen. Collins featuring with four safeties. Frisch had three and Adams turned in a pair.

Gus Suhr hit safely for his fourth straight day, the Bucco first baseman garnering a single in the big fourth inning.

Reds Lodge Protest Over Chicago Victory

CINCINNATI, April 16.—The Cincinnati Reds will protest yesterday's 8-2 victory of the Chicago Cubs. The protest will be based on an incorrect ruling by Umpire Donnelly.

The Reds' pitcher, Ogden, had made first in the fifth inning, Douthit first to Stephenson in left field. Ogden saw Stephenson drop the ball as he fell in attempting the catch, and he tore down to second, but Umpire Donnelly thought Stephenson had caught the ball and signaled that Douthit was out.

Ogden raced back toward first which was occupied by Douthit, and he was put out between first and second. Donnelly finally admitted Stephenson did not catch the ball, and Douthit was ruled safe and Ogden out. The protest says Ogden was off his base because of the incorrect signal by Donnelly.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—I get a scheme for Washington to cop the pennant. You know we never win a game with Hoover looking on. So the idea is to get him up to the ball park every afternoon and he can sign appointments, etc., in his box during early innings. Then when we need a batting rally, we get an usher to say the gas man is down at the White House and wants to read the meter. So Hoover beats it and we win the game.

Nick Altrock

I see after holding out against the Cards, Chick Hafey was traded to Cincinnati. That's what you call being sold short. If Chick gets into a world series this year, it'll be on a scalper's ticket.

Chillysauce

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Their grueling four-day task in St. Louis completed in a befitting manner, the Pirates already have convinced a large section of their followers they will be a hustling club this year, regardless of their finish in October. Coach Clyde Sukeforth's crew snapped [illegible] with the world champions on their home grounds and without the services of their ace pitcher, Heinie Meine, was just about the worst [illegible] the Redbirds had to face last season, yet despite his absence the new Buccaneers were able to get an even break in the four clashes.

A little luck in the second battle and the Pirates might have humiliated the champs in three of the four games. The 50-50 party, nevertheless, was a moral victory for a club which is trying to find itself. The result of such a series is a compliment to any club that hustles. In the last analysis any team is allowed nine men on the field and nine trying can make things mighty unpleasant for as many fixed stars.

The Pirates, however, are not without their luminaries. It is hard to find better performers anywhere than the Waner boys and Pie Traynor, and there are some youngsters on the team who seem destined to acquire greatness.

The story out of Los Angeles yesterday to the effect that Outfielder Dave Barbee of the Pirates had been returned to the Hollywood club of the Pacific Coast League could not be confirmed by President William E. Benswanger, who doubts the authenticity of the tale. Benswanger said:

"When I left Gibson in St. Louis Tuesday night nothing had been done concerning Barbee and I doubt that the manager has closed with the Hollywood folks since then. We intend to dispose of one outfielder as there are still six on the team."

If We Seek Favors We Should Willingly Grant Them

What's your favorite family feud?

Of course you have one. Every family has.

Sometimes it's a pet food, or a particular chair, or "Whataya mean by hogging the bathroom this morning when you knew I was late for the office?"

For there's just one thing you can be sure of about families wherever a bunch of relations are gathered together, there you'll find the makings of a grouch.

So whether your name is Smith or Jones or White, you're going to get a kick out of Betty's letter. For Betty is suffering from the very latest and hottest form of family feud—radiolitis!

And is she out for blood? Listen!

"Dear Sally:

"I wonder if maybe you can't help me with some of your good advice. I certainly need it, as I am just about ready to blow up.

"I am 17 and I like jazz. I have a sister 19 who likes symphonies. Well, that part is all right, I guess. Anyone has a right to like something different. But here's the way it is.

"Just as soon as she is occupied with something besides the radio, I let the station she has picked slowly die out and I let some good jazz come in softly. But she has sharper ears than anyone else I know, so on go the flute solos again, in spite of what I want.

QUESTIONS FAIRNESS

"She goes to two different symphonies and mother is everlastingly dragging me to one or the other. All through the week I have to put up with them. Then when Monday night comes, I think that for a couple of hours they could stand some racket until the jamboree program I like is over; but it seems it is too much to ask of them. I get so angry I feel like chopping the radio up with an ax, but it isn't quite paid for yet, so you see what a predicament I am in.

"Naturally, while I am at high school all day they get all the jazz they can stand, so by the time I get home it's 'time for the Standard Symphony,' or something else like it, and off goes the jazz.

"I haven't heard a half hour straight of the kind of program I like, and I don't expect to. Do you think that's fair?

"BETTY."

MUST GRANT FAVORS

Well, no. Maybe it isn't, kid. But let me ask you this: Are YOU fair? Is it fair for you to sneak up on the radio and turn off the program Sis likes, whether she is willing to let you or not? It's just as bad for you to do that as it is for the rest of the folks to turn 'em off on you. And you have no right to expect better treatment than you give.

Perhaps if you'd try considering what the rest of the family likes, and cheerfully giving it to them, instead of sulking and feeling sorry for yourself, they'd be willing to listen now and then to what you like. You can't expect to get favors, Betty, unless you're willing to grant them—not grudgingly, but willingly and courteously.

In fact, that's the only way you'll ever get along anywhere, youngster. You'll never find anybody who likes everything you like. And if you expect other folks to let you enjoy what you like, you'll have to give them the same privilege.

* * *

And now, how about the rest of you? Since feuds have become the favorite topic, here's a chance to air yours. And what a sympathetic hand you'll get from the rest of the human race!

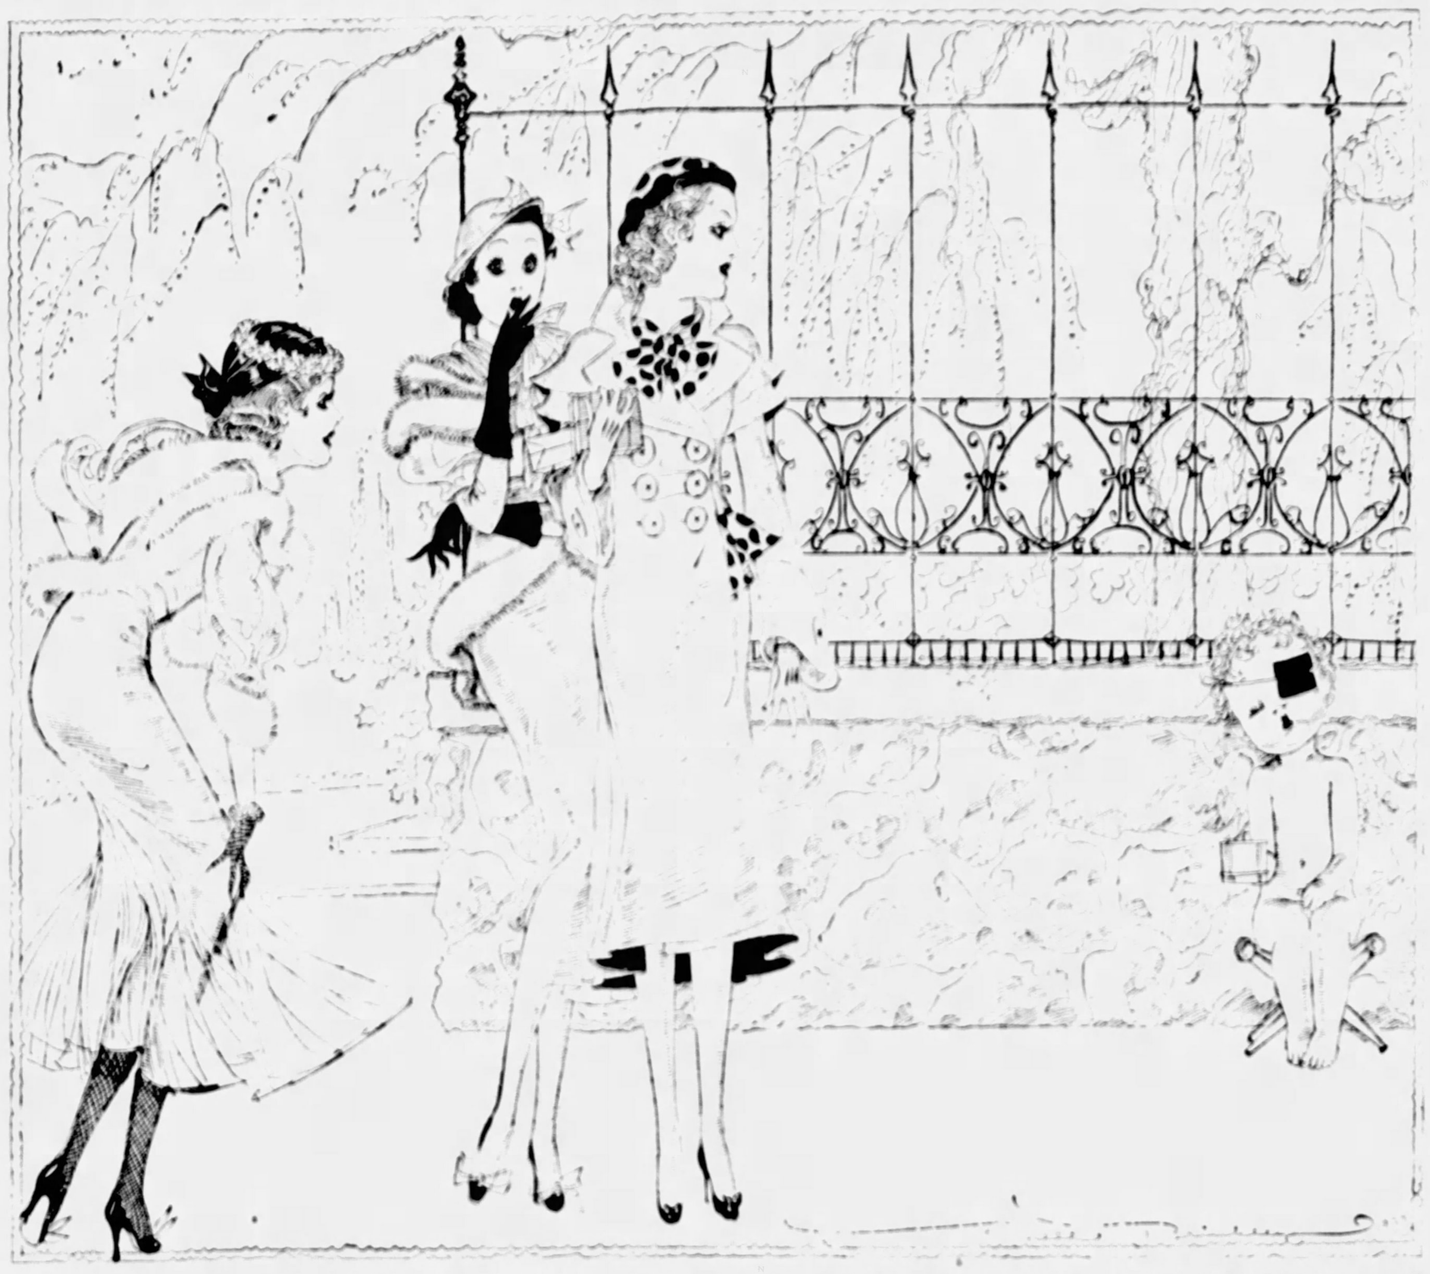
'HAVEN'T WE SEEN HIM SOMEWHERE BEFORE?'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



Suspicious Demoselles pause before the gentle fakir. Susette, in her new blue double-breasted spring coat with dinner-plate buttons, scowls with her bird's-wing eyebrows, and says, "Haven't I seen him somewhere before?"

Suzanne, in padded-shoulder effect spring suit and cocked hat, taps her lips with new black gloves, and says, "Hm-m, let me see—haven't I also seen that yellow head and pink face?"

Solange, in netted stockings and gloves and high-waisted frock, bends closer to peer with her pretty near-sighted eyes, and declares, "Of course I have—sometime, somewhere! And he did the most prodigious tricks—made flowers bloom where there were none before, and—I gave him my heart—no less. Ha-ha—of course I know him. He is supposed to be blind—and so piteous, and he does not have a license to beg."

And right she is—Solange! They have seen him before—and so have a world of tender-hearted Fair Ones—to their chagrin. Even though they went on loving him after finding him out—they felt rather foolish when the roses he made to bloom out of nothing at all—faded!

Once get him out from under that patch—and domesticated—he is truth and honesty itself.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Return Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When attending the theater or a concert should a girl leave her gloves on or remove them? I have seen people do either, and I have wondered if it is a matter of personal choice.

2. Should the return address on envelopes be on the back flap or on the upper left hand corner? In an envelope of this type it seems permissible to put it on the back.

3. As I have grown older, I have felt that the terms aunt and uncle do not seem suitable. Would it be incorrect to drop these terms and call them by their first names? MARIE.

1. It is a matter of choice.

2. Either is correct. For such a small envelope as yours, I agree that it would seem more appropriate for you to write the return address on the flap, since if you write it on the front of the envelope it would give the envelope a crowded appearance.

3. I think that you are wrong about this. You better keep the dignity and respect that the use of the title gives.

Good Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am invited to a party three miles from my home. A young man, who lives out my way, will be there and we will probably ride home together. Should I pay my own bus fare?

2. If a young man asks to take me home from a party, and I know that he has very little spending money and it is out of his way, should I decline?

3. Is it proper for a young girl to ask a young man, with whom she is acquainted, to dance with her or with her friends?

4. Would it be proper to ask a young man of short acquaintance to a party with her?

READER.

1. No, the young man would certainly be embarrassed if you do not allow him to pay your fare.

2. No. If he doesn't wish to take you home from the party or can't afford to, he won't ask you. But if he does ask you, and if you wish to accept his hospitality, allow him to have this privilege.

3. No.

4. Yes, if you know him fairly well.

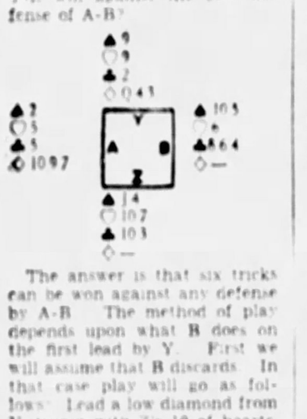
End Play Problems

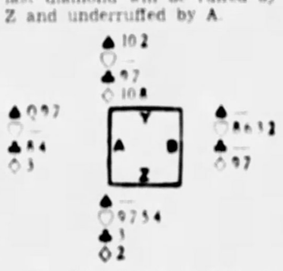
Problem 5 and its solution is given below.

Hearts are trumps. Y is to lead. How many tricks can Y-Z win against the best defense of A-B?



The answer is that six tricks can be won against any defense by A-B. The method of play depends upon what B does on the first lead by Y. First we will assume that B discards. In that case play will go as follows: Lead a low diamond from Y, trump with Z's 10 of hearts. Lead back Z's 7 of hearts. Y will win the trick. Lead Y's Q of diamonds. If B discards a black card upon the first lead of diamonds he must now discard another black card, leaving either a single spade or a single club in his hand. Discard from Z the losing card of the suit of which B has two cards. Lead from Y the suit of which Z has two cards, both of which are now good. Last of all lay down Z's card of the suit of which he retains only one card.

In case B refuses to discard on the first diamond led from Y he will trump and Z will overtrump. The next two tricks will be won by Z's J of spades and 10 of clubs. Y will trump a low black card led by Z. The fifth trick will be won by Y's Q of diamonds. Y's lead of his last diamond will be ruffed by Z and underruffed by A.



There is no trump. Y is to lead. What is Y's best lead, and what is the best defensive play by A-B?

The solution will appear next week.

All these End Play Problems are supposed to be played with all hands exposed to the view of all players, so that each may make his best plays.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Keep a Close Lookout for Any Sign of Scarlet Fever

Scarlet fever is prevalent in some of our large cities. On this account it is important for parents to acquaint themselves with the prevention and symptoms of the disease.

Dr. Copeland

Scarlet fever, or scarlatina, is an acute contagious and infectious disease. While no age is exempt from the infection, about 90 per cent of the cases occur in children from one to 15 years of age. The disease quickly developes after exposure to the fever. The incubation period may be as short as one day, or it may take about a week.

In children fever, nausea, vomiting, headache and general uneasiness, with severe sore throat, are the first symptoms noted. Occasionally a convulsion may usher in the attack.

The eruption appears from 12 to 36 hours after the initial symptoms. It is usually first seen in the neck and upper part of the chest, in the form of a uniform red flush. When viewed closely it discloses minute spots of a darker hue.

This eruption gradually fades, beginning on the third or fourth day, and by the end of the week has almost disappeared. Then follows a period of desquamation, or peeling, which may continue for from four to six weeks. During this time it is very important to guard against chilling. Otherwise some of the numerous complications that render scarlet fever so dangerous and fatal may develop and create a critical situation.

The throat inflammation may spread to the ears, often involving the mastoid, or to the nasal sinuses. The glands of the neck may become involved. A very frequent complication is an attack of acute Bright's disease. To avoid these untoward results the diet of the patient should be bland, consisting largely of milk, with the exclusion of meat and meat soups.

The disease is communicated from the sick to the well through the secretions of the mouth, nose and discharging ears, as well as by direct contact with the patient. It is barely possible that scales from the peeling skin are dangerous and health departments quarantine the patient until desquamation is completed and all discharges have been arrested.

Prevention of the spread of scarlet fever depends largely upon the careful inspection of school children, excluding all those who show suspicious symptoms. Various tests and protective inoculations have been used, but their action is not always devoid of unpleasant reactions. The "Dick test" has been used to determine the susceptibility of children to the disease. In asylums and institutions, where there is danger of an epidemic, these precautions have met with considerable success.

Mild cases of scarlet fever may pass unnoticed and prove the source of an epidemic of considerable extent. Hence it is important that no symptom indicating the possible presence of the disease be overlooked.

Answers to Health Queries

P. R. Q.—Do persons weigh less in summer than in the winter?

3—What should a girl of 17, 4 feet 11½ inches tall, weigh?

A—Not as a rule.

2—Yes.

B. E. A. Q.—How much should a girl of 21, 5 feet 3 inches tall, weigh?

2.—How many hours sleep does a girl of 21 require?

A.—She should weigh about 123 pounds. This is about the average weight for a person of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

Household Hints

When cooking fruit, add a pinch of baking powder and only half the usual amount of sugar will be required to sweeten it.

To clean black kid gloves, apply a mixture of equal parts best blacking and olive oil, paying particular attention to the parts between the fingers.

For obstinate grease marks on wallpaper use fuller's earth. Dust it over the spot, leave for a time, then brush off. If necessary, repeat the process.

Fruit stains on linen may be removed by sponging with lemon juice and then washing with hot water. If lemon is not available borax will be found to be just as effective.

Black leather handbags can be cleaned by rubbing with a clean cloth and afterwards with another cloth dipped in a mixture of one teaspoonful of sweet oil and two teaspoonfuls of milk. When dry the bag should be polished with another rag, using a white shoe cream or furniture polish.

Whipped cream is a luxury that we cannot always indulge in as often as we would like. But here is a little secret that will permit you to add it to your menu more frequently. Before whipping thin cream add a few drops of glycerine to it, perhaps three or four drops to a half pint. Glycerine is odorless, flavorless and harmless, so the only result will be one that you can see by the rapidity with which this quality of cream will whip to a desirable consistency.

The Busy School Teacher

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Mother precipitated matters when she inadvertently inquired of 5-year-old Richard what he did during recess that day in kindergarten.

"Nothing," said the small boy. "I didn't go out for recess." To his mother's "Why not?" he replied that his teacher had kept him in because he couldn't get his rubbers on, and she had spent the recess period teaching him how.

The mother flamed in maternal indignation. Keeping her baby in during recess! No fresh air, no play! What did that teacher think she was doing, anyway? She'd see her about this.

But let us consider the teacher a minute. At midsemester she had received more than 30 new pupils. Most of them had learned at home how to do things for themselves. Most of them had mothers who felt that home responsibility included making them competent to get in and out of outer clothing, teaching them proper toilet habits, neat arrangement of clothing, getting a drink of water unassisted—being, in short, pretty independent little human beings.

But Richard's mother, who had babied him to such an extent that he couldn't even get into his rubbers alone, became enraged at his teacher for trying to show him how. When you feel indignant at a teacher's seeming neglect of your child, remember:

A teacher can't put on rubbers, coats or hats for 30 children, and get them all out in time for 10 minutes of play.

A teacher can't tie laces on 30 pairs of shoes and get any teaching done.

A teacher cannot accompany each child to the toilet.

A teacher cannot hold 30 handkerchiefs while 30 small noses are attended to, nor kiss 30 small fingers if they get pinched or scratched during the day.

You can do lots of things for one child that you can't do for a group. Think of this before you enroll your child for his first school days. The more independent you can make him the happier he is going to be and the faster he will progress. And how his teacher will bless you!

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

A chronically red nose requires medical treatment, being due, usually, to a too hearty diet. The nose that flares up only when brushed with cold winds should be soothed every night with a heavy tissue cream, and never powdered vigorously.

Feet that are cold and clammy need to do dance steps. Something wrong with circulation. Vigorous massage will afford temporary relief, so will friction with alcohol and vigorous applications of a coarse Turkish towel. Lift up and down on the toes. Place the heels on the floor and tap with the toes. Keep on until the flesh glows.

When nails are soft, thin and delicate, bend over easily at the eaves, let the finger tips soak for a few minutes in strong salt water every night. For brittle nails, there are cuticle creams, which are beneficial. The addition of milk and orange juice to the regular diet is recommended. Never use scissors on brittle nails; file them with emery boards.

Highly energized gals, all full of kilowatts, must watch out that they don't get into the habit of making quick, jerky movements, which are fatal to grace and perfect posture. Rushing about sets the bells jangling in the central nervous system and it's not good for digestion or appearance. The lovely lady needs to have about her an air of repose which makes her a more restful companion than when she is on the jump. Activity is a law of life, but relaxation is just as necessary if one is to hang onto one's youth, if the physical mechanism is to make repairs, if health of mind is to be normal and vigorous.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY :-: :-: By ANTHONY ABBOT

Quest Begun to Get Facts Concerning Death of Mystery Woman

CHAPTER IX

District Attorney Dougherty faced Colt in the middle of the room and laid two red hands on the chief's shoulders.

"For once you and I agree, Thatcher," he announced, "this is murder!"

Colt nodded somberly.

"And I think I've got the solution!" added the District Attorney in a husky whisper.

"Which is—"

"Inside job—those death threats, killing of a dog and parrot—all that stuff—get this room mate woman and give her the works!"

"You mean Christine Quires killed Lola?"

"Or knows who did."

"Motive, Dougherty?"

"The dead girl knew too much—about Love, robberies."

"But how was it done?"

"I don't know how, it was done. But, no matter what kind of hocuspocus they use, we can find it, in time," proclaimed the District Attorney with an oracular wave of his mighty arm. "You'll see that the jewel ring is at the bottom of this."

There was a telephone beside the bed. Escaping from Dougherty's grasp, Colt lifted the receiver and called for his private number at police headquarters.

"Inspector Flynn, please," the Commissioner murmured into the transmitter and then turning his luminous eyes on me, he added:

"Tony, get Lieut. Fallon. Tell him what's happened. Have him check up on his men to see if any of them heard anything unusual. Then report to me here in five minutes. And Tony—"

I was at the door.

"Find out who is in charge of the apartment house—no employe goes home until released."

"I understand, chief."

ACTIVITY BEGINS

As I hurried from the death chamber, I knew full well what was now happening down at Center street. Once the Commissioner's message was received, action commenced. Instantly the Bureau of Criminal Information was notified that a woman named Lola Carewe had died suddenly and mysteriously—murder was suspected. All the facts Colt gave over the telephone were transmitted to this central bureau and thus made available, if and when necessary, to the entire force. Meanwhile, a corps of specialists was being organized and dispatched to the scene, detectives from the borough homicide squad, with their official photographers and stenographers. With them would come the medical examiner or one of his assistants. Probably the inspector commanding the particular detective division which included Lola's apartment house in its boundaries, would also appear, in company with the captain of the local precinct.

Knowing that these troops from the homicide squad would soon be in possession of the premises, I was also sure that Thatcher Colt would follow his usual custom of learning as much as possible before his reinforcements arrived. It is sensible police practice in the conflict between authorities and witnesses to strike at the earliest possible moment. In the shock that overcomes all except the most hardened—or the most insane—of criminals, just after a violent death, the barriers of deception are difficult to sustain. A murderer may prepare in advance the most convincing story and yet, immediately following the execution of his dark deed, find himself utterly unable to speak a syllable of his lying tale.

GUARD IS AMAZED

Closing the door behind me, I crossed the wide expanse of the living-room floor. In one of the easy-chairs by the fireplace sat Dr. Hugh Baldwin, smoking a cigaret. His bag lay between his feet. The physician's alert gaze searched the fire and ashes in quest of what only he could have revealed. Standing between the window, his hands folded at his thighs, was Chung, his great and ugly face a little to one side, the baldness of his enormous crown gleaming under a suspended lamp. Neither man seemed to notice me as I opened the front door and strode to the head of the iron staircase. There I encountered Lieut. Fallon.

"I saw the doctor go in," was Fallon's greeting, "but the chief sent word that everything was oke and told me not to stir from here until I was relieved. What the hell is happening in there?"

When I enlightened Fallon, the look of demoralized astonishment on that honest Irish face was beyond all art.

"By God! It couldn't have been done by anybody getting into the room," he blurted. "Nobody could get by me or these boys of mine, and there's no such thing as secret doorways in this joint. There is something awful funny about all this, Mr. Abbot! Tell the chief I'll report back to him in five minutes."

Down the iron staircase I raced and through the dim corridor to the lift, thence down to the deserted lobby. I found that Lowell Courtleigh, which was actually the name of the sleepy elevator operator, was in sole charge of the premises until morning. Here was a chance to do a little sleuthing on my own account.

SURPRISING NEWS

"Did you see Miss Quires go out tonight?" I asked, after relaying Colt's orders to him.

"No, I come on at 12 o'clock—but I seen her come in!"

"You saw what?"

The shocking impact of the elevator boy's unexpected announcement nearly made me gasp the words. Christine Quires had come home! When? Where was she now?

A hundred questions crowded to my tongue, clamoring for an answer. But I had to pretend only a casual interest in this astounding information.

"You are positive you saw Miss Quires come in?" I repeated.

"Yeah—I saw her come in."

"About what time?"

"Around 15 minutes after 12—soon after the New Year whistles blew."

Christine had come home before we had reached the penthouse! But that was impossible!

My heart was still in my mouth, but I managed a composed countenance as I asked:

"Alone?"

"A guy brought her to the door and he wanted to come up, but she wouldn't let him. Said she didn't feel so good. I took her up alone."

COLT SEEKS TRUTH

"Did she say anything to you on the way up?"

"No—say, what do you think you are, a district attorney or something?"

"No, I'm only a policeman," I told him, with such dignity as I could muster. He gave me a look and said:

"Yeah? And I'm a congressman."

"Take me upstairs again," I told him after several more questions. "Maybe the Police Commissioner will want to talk to you in a little while."

"All right. I'll be glad to talk to him," he emphasized.

Chung admitted me with a decorous bow.

During my absence the spacious living room had been taken over as a chamber of inquisition. As I had expected, Thatcher Colt was already started on his quest for the truth about the death of Lola Carewe. Dr. Baldwin had been exiled to an ignoble solitude in the maid's room. The Police Commissioner and the District Attorney had closed off the living room, ready for the examination of witnesses, and having admitted me, Chung was sent to request the immediate presence of Mrs. Carewe. Meanwhile, Colt and Dougherty were listening to an indignant report from Lieut. Fallon.

"Mr. Commissioner," the detective recited, "my men have been strictly on the job every minute of the time. The only person who entered this apartment was Dr. Baldwin."

"Have you checked—"

Here I burst in excitedly to explain what I had learned. Fallon stared at me as if I had told him a ghost story. Dougherty heaved an incredulous groan.

"But we have searched this place room by room," said Colt. "I have looked into closets. I have opened trunks and even peered into cedar chests."

"I don't believe you can put too much reliance on what an elevator boy says," Dougherty demurred. "Here's an apartment full of people. None of them saw Christine—and you don't find trap doors or secret corridors in modern New York apartment houses."

He peered at Colt as one who lays down an unanswerable argument.

"She might have come—and gone—before we ever reached here," reasoned Colt aloud.

"I don't quite see—" began Dougherty, but the Commissioner turned back abruptly to me.

"Could the elevator boy describe Christine's escort?"

"The usual thing. Tall, evening clothes, would fit the description of 2,000,000 men in New York City tonight."

Colt's eyes were lustrous with the challenge of this extraordinary affair as he turned back to the detective.

"Now, Fallon, get on the job again. Keep your men at the doors, just as before. In spite of what has happened, we can't be sure the danger is over for Mrs. Carewe tonight."

"Okay, chief."

As Fallon turned to go, there came a violent interruption. The door to Lola's boudoir was flung noisily open. Vincent Rowland, stiffly erect in all his five feet two inches, strode imperiously into the room. Flight was in the millionaire's eyes. At sight of the old man, Colt rested a detaining hand on Fallon's arm.

Synopsis

Lola Carewe, night club habitue, receives a death threat, New Year's Eve. Previously her dog and parrot were mysteriously killed. District Attorney Merle K. Dougherty suspects Lola of being the "brains" of the jewel thief ring that has baffled the police. Although her husband, Gaylord Gifford, died practically penniless, Lola lives in luxury. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt places a guard in Lola's penthouse apartment, warning her that she must not be alone in a room at any time. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother; Chung, the butler; Eunice, the maid, and Vincent Rowland, an attorney, are present. In the living room the commissioner finds a bag belonging to Christine Quires, Lola's guest. It evidently had been used that night, yet Lola informs Colt that Christine is at the Lion's Paw, a roadhouse, where Lola was to have joined her. Colt is surprised to find Mrs. Carewe's room in strange contrast to the surrounding wealth. Lola's own boudoir is a gaudy contradiction of the living room's elegance. Lola refuses to reveal the identity of the young man whose photograph adorns her dresser. Against orders, she enters the guest room alone. A scream follows. Rushing in, Colt finds her on the floor, unconscious. Dr. Hugh Baldwin, a friend, diagnoses the case as a heart attack. Lola dies. Colt calls it murder. Unnoticed, he takes something from the doctor's bag.

Now Go On

The elevator boy was positive that he saw the girl come in.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Katherine Rush to the Sick Room

Not until I reached the door of the farmhouse did I realize that Jim was so close at my heels. He spoke anxiously as I fumbled for the key which I always carry with me.

"Will you tell Mr. Graham, please, that you saw me on the way up to the house. I don't want him to know I told you about his wanting me to take care of you, but I do want him to know I was on the job."

"I'll do that, Jim," I said. "Thank you so much. Good-night."

His answering "Good-night" came to me as I locked the door. The house was dark save for the usual stair and hall lights which we always keep burning, and I judged that everybody was asleep except the watcher in the library where the hapless Chinese messenger lay. I tip-toed down the hall toward the stairs, but before I reached them Harry Underwood opened the door of the library, stepped into the hall and looked around. As he saw me, he came forward swiftly.

"You're the answer to a watcher's prayer," he said. "I hate to route Katrina out, but I think she ought to come down here."

"I'll get her at once," I said, racing up the stairs without waiting to ask what was the matter, although I was wild with curiosity to know what had happened. I knew that only for some grave emergency would he disturb the little nurse's much-needed rest.

WAKENS KATHERINE

"Stand still, you little idiot," Mr. Underwood's tone was so militantly commanding that I stopped in my tracks.

"Very well," I replied demurely. "I'll travel more slowly. Is there anything especially you want me to say to Katherine when I waken her?"

"Only that the Chinese is showing signs of recovering consciousness, and she strictly enjoined me to let her know whenever he did."

"All right, I'll tell her," I said, and went more sedately up the stairs and down the hall to my mother-in-law's room which Katherine was occupying during Mother Graham's sojourn in the nursery.

I tapped lightly, and Katherine, who is as ready to wake at a signal as any fireman, called "What's wanted?" and, at my answer speedily unlocked the door and admitted me. I gave her the message which Mr. Underwood had sent her and she began dressing with the rapidity which long practice had given her.

She opened the door and stepped into the hall, but I was beside her when she reached the top of the stairs.

"Do you think you're going down with me?" she asked. "Nothing doing, lady. Dicky would murder me. He's issued strict orders that you're not to stick your nose inside that room until after your work is done."

MADGE IS INSISTENT

"He hasn't given any orders like that to me," I said, keeping pace with her hurried progress down the stairs, "and I refuse to be bound by any second-hand instructions. Besides, my play is practically done. Two hours more work at the most will finish it. I really ought to have gone on tonight but I was sleepy and I thought I'd do better work in the morning."

"All the more reason why you should go to bed now," she commented, but her tone was exceedingly mild and without emphasis.

"Don't waste your breath trying to keep me out of this room," I said, as we reached the door of the library. "I'm coming right along with you."

"All right," she yielded. "We'll probably need your memory at that. He speaks pretty good English, doesn't he?"

"Fair," I answered. "Wait," as she put her hand upon the door, "if he's conscious and can speak English there won't be any reason for bringing that Chinese friend of Harry's out to translate the things he said in his delirium, will there?"

She looked at me quizically.

"Exercise the well-known bean a bit," she said. "'In vino veritals' can be translated with 'delirium' for 'wine' any time. Consequently, with the fear of those other men before his eyes he won't be apt to spill now all that he may have when he was raving. But I imagine whatever he says will be distinctly worth reverent attention."

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 16 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative, safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Curious, indeed! Not on Madam Superfluous' most select list. A nervous bag of somewhat misshapened bones is neither one of them what lets themselves go, nor one of them what starves to keep thin. And she is certainly far from a stylish stout.

Just bear this thought in mind
I'll sail you in the housegow
If you wear the front behind."

Electric Rate Inquiry

Hope of Early Relief Is Seen in the Duquesne Light Company Probe. Comment on Local News.

The Public Service Commission's announcement that the companies whose rates will be investigated first, in compliance with the recent resolution to inquire into the fairness of the charges for electric service, will include the Duquesne Light Company and the West Penn Power Company is good news for the Pittsburgh district. It holds out the hope of early relief from unfair rates.

City Council is considering the advisability of instituting legal proceedings to compel the Duquesne Light Company to reduce its charges to a fair level. But because of the expense and delay inevitable in such proceedings they should be utilized only as a last resort. It is perhaps not unreasonable to expect that the Public Service Commission inquiry will make a lawsuit unnecessary.

The Duquesne Light Company has admitted that it is in a position to reduce rates. It would place itself in a better light before the public if it would immediately put into effect the slight cut offered by its president, Frank R. Phillips, in his recent conference with City Council. The company's delay in adjusting its rate to changed economic conditions smacks of obstinacy.

The popular dissatisfaction with the system under which public utilities, with monopolistic franchises and with exemption from taxes to which other business enterprises are subject, are enabled to charge exorbitant rates is certain to find expression at the next regular session of the Legislature. That is shown by the answers that candidates have made to the Sun-Telegraph's questionnaire.

It is to be hoped that many citizens cut out and laid away for reference the table printed in the Sun-Telegraph Thursday, showing how the candidates for the Legislature answered questions as to their attitude on the public utilities, prohibition and the Blue Law. There is such a multiplicity of candidates that some such guide is indispensable if one is to make an intelligent choice.

The Civic Club of Allegheny County has also issued a useful guide for voters in a pamphlet containing biographical sketches of candidates for state and legislative offices. Every citizen should study it, for the information, while not as complete as is desirable, does offer some indication of what might be expected of the candidates if elected.

The interest that is being shown by various groups in the candidates and their views on moot questions is an encouraging evidence of civic alertness. Sportsmen are inquiring, for instance, what the legislative candidates will do to keep the Game Commission out of politics. The Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association is concerned with what they do in regard to taxes.

The Manufacturers' Association warns its members that unless the state's expenditures are drastically cut the rate of taxation will have to be increased or new sources of taxation found, and adds that "it is business insufance to ascertain candidates' views now rather than later." The forthcoming special session to provide unemployment relief may indicate what forms of tax revision will be proposed.

Public Safety Director Clark's warning that posting of political signs except on billboards would not be tolerated was apparently no jest, for a man was arrested for posting a candidate's cards on poles in the West End and was fined $5 in Police Court yesterday. Probably it would not require very many arrests to put an end to this nuisance.

The "tag-fixing" nuisance is already well on the way to abatement, though the system of accounting by which every tag issued must be accounted for has not yet been put into effect. Automobile law violations, subjecting drivers to tags, are likely to diminish very strikingly once Controller Kerr has the new system working. If they do not diminish, the city will have a new source of revenue.

Supt. Walsh, of the police bureau, has instituted a much needed investigation in his inquiry into the honesty of certain obscure organizations which have been soliciting money from the public, ostensibly for charitable purposes. A solicitor of one of these organizations admitted, the police said, that he was permitted to retain as his own remuneration one third of all he collected. That is outrageous.

The safest plan for the public to follow in con- tributing to charity is to give only to well established social service or church societies of whose honesty there can be no doubt, and to require credentials of all solicitors. No better way can be found at the present time for making a charitable contribution than by a donation to Senator Harris' "family-help-family" fund.

Congressman Smith, of Beaver County, says he has the promise of the United States engineers that a report on the feasibility of the Beaver-Mahoning route for the Ohio River and Lake Erie canal will be forthcoming the week of May 16. Let us hope it will be favorable. There is a federal project which would be of inestimable benefit to Pittsburgh and would furnish jobs to a multitude of men.

The Sunday Sun-Telegraph's semi-annual cook book, to be issued as a tabloid supplement tomorrow, is right up-to-the-minute, for the recipes have been chosen with the idea of providing tasty dishes at a minimum of expense. Then, too, there are many hints for utilizing electric refrigerators in the preparation of warm weather foods.

The American Weekly, issued as a supplement with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph, will be replete with important articles. One of particular interest to Pittsburghers deals with the impending divorce of two former residents of this city, Ann Harding and Harry Bannister, stage stars. The illustrations are notable, too, especially the frontispiece, a reproduction in full color of a beautiful painting.

An informal photograph of Ethelbert Nevin, the composer, at the piano; a stirring photograph of a round-up of wild horses by cowboys in California, and a charming group photograph of Marion Davies, Clark Gable and Eileen Percy in the costumes they wore at Miss Davies' "baby party" recently, can be mentioned as samples of the good things in the Gravure Section of the Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Love's Unhappy Landings

Many a girl imagines that a man has lost his heart when he has merely mislaid his discretion, after a few cocktails.

* * *

Every day in every way marriage like love and kisses is being made easier and easier for a man to attain—and it is becoming harder to make him attain it.

* * *

The modern girl knows how to get a man up in the air—but she could get a lot of tips from her grandmother on how to bring him down to a "happy landing" at the altar.

Every normal husband will assure you that what he is fighting for around the house from the altar to the grave is just PEACE.

* * *

Every girl fondly hopes some day to capture that happy medium between the ossified heart of a man who has never been in love at all and the burnt-out heart of the man who has always been in love a little.

* * *

If you believe all you read all wedding rings will soon be banished in the public museum along with the other barbaric relics of slavery and instruments of torture.

* * *

Once upon a time a man drank a glass of beer in order to get a substantial free lunch; now he goes to a tea party and eats a lot of indigestible hors d'oeuvres in order to get a few free cocktails.

A woman's regret at the loss of a good umbrella or an attractive husband is always softened by the comforting reflection that she won't have to keep her eye on them any longer.

* * *

The modern girl may not be such an ardent feminist as her mother was, but she is certainly showing a lot more backbone these evenings.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 16.—Here I am again at one of those teas stuck off in a dark corner as always. The way people glance at me indulge a high-nosed sniff and pass on you'd think they just borrowed me for the afternoon from a museum. Ouiba the Goat Faced Boy of the Himalayas or such.

Everybody seems to be here except the pig woman. And, of course, Mrs. Oakleigh-Oakleigh or whatever the name is is all over the place. The high-handshaker with the lorgnette. Perhaps she'd like to play a little leap frog. She seems a bit stiff. That limbers one up.

Gene Buck looking for some one. Yoo-hoo! Here I am over in the Black Hole of Calcutta. Surely you recall me. Ziegfeld used to ring me at 6 a. m. too. No news passed me up. Well I can go on fingering the fringe on this curtain. If worst comes to worst, I can plait it.

This is my meter. Start out to have a little fun and wind up plaiting fringe. The lady television with Corey Ford is just back from Denver. Lovely climate, she opines. So altitudinous. Well I've been to Denver too. Ask anyone around the Brown Palace.

Maybe I haven't been exactly to Denver. But I have a cousin who visited Cripple Creek. Our family is traveled and worldly that way. Sometimes we go along without hearing from some of them for years and then all of a sudden we get a postcard from Syracuse.

The old dodo on the divan with David Hampton has been glaring my way. He might like to come over, but I don't believe he can make it without help. I'll dither him for a nickel a corner. Steady grandpa! Has anyone the slightest idea what I am talking about?

They are passing dabs of caviar. Frank Sullivan couldn't get along with just one dab. He taxes six. That bird probably hasn't any idea caviar runs into important money. Can you beat that? The waiter starts toward me and turns back. Ever see such crazies?

* * *

Perhaps I'll get some ice cream. I know they have it. I saw them rolling in the freezer. I always arrive at parties with the ice cream and hired butlers. The count with the striped pants and cutaway coat tells them he is building a little place in Surrey just to rough it before the Riviera season opens. He adores the British countryside. Moss Hart has the dope. They all go nuts about English things after they learn to speak it.

* * *

Heish ho! Still nobody seems to know I'm here. I'll bet they could see me on a sunny day. I've had people sight me up as far as Seventy-second street. One day a fellow recognized me all the way from Yonkers. The Wall street broker wonders what the world is coming to. Ushers will now pass among you with slips for answers. Can't that block-headed waiter hand me just one of those chunks of sausage on toothpicks? If Mrs. Oakleigh-Oakleigh would look the other way, I might snatch her cheese sandwich.

* * *

This is not bad. One of the flappers bumps into me in the dark. She didn't know there was anyone here. My, my, isn't this priceless? A tea party with a dash of romance. Maybe she'll take me out of this dungeon to participate in a little fresh air. She's not only heard of me but is one of my greatest admirers. We have something in common. She thinks I'm a finished writer. But there's something nasty in the way she accents "finished." She's charged anyway. I'll be indifferent. Lovely weather, Madame! Are you going to Newport this season? She doesn't hear. She sees George Jessel. All right, if she prefers the stage to literature let her. Let her? You couldn't prevent her with six gunboats and the National Guard.

* * *

Maybe if I slipped a message in a bottle. I might eventually get a bite to eat. Still, I should be exercised about eating. Join the gluttons? Not I. While they gorge, I keep my figure. How little they know the peace and happiness that comes into the cloistered life of a hermit. They may have their frivols and wordly baubles. I'll take my dark corner and the curtain fringe.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

What's the greatest thing in life?

Self-expression? Self-development leading on to great and greater success?

Or that love which often interferes with self-expression, the love that means the merging and sacrifice of personality?

Which would YOU choose if you had to make that difficult decision?

If YOU had a great name and a great love, and you couldn't keep both—WHICH WOULD YOU SAVE?

Ann Harding and Harry Bannister have faced that problem for some years. Both successful actors when they married, Ann went on reaping more and more honors in Hollywood, but Harry Bannister, despite every effort, fell behind. Presently people began to introduce him as "Ann Harding's husband."

To be known just as "some woman's husband"—that's a bitter dose for any brilliant man's pride. Brilliant women, to be sure, have always had to take that dose. Many of them are still taking it. And no one thinks that their self-respect is damaged because they are known as "Sam Brown's wife." But as ANY man will tell you, that's another story.

Be that as it may, success for Ann in the studios meant misery for Harry in the home, so now he's off to Reno, to rid himself of marriage and make a life for himself again.

A life for himself! Will it be worth more than that life with Ann?

And how about Ann? She, too, made a choice; stayed by her career and let the man she loved go to his.

Two fine, sincere people, deeply in love, choosing a career instead of marriage—

Thousands of obscure men and women, unknown to fame, will think about that, will wonder if they did right.

That bright youngster, working at her first secretarial job.

Two years ago she was dreaming of love in a rose-covered cottage, as girls have always dreamed. The only man, a baby or two, what more could life offer?

But today she's not quite so sure that life can't offer more. In spite of hard times, she's had two raises last year. The boss says she has a fine future before her if she'll work hard.

She thinks what that future would mean. An apartment of her own. Lovely clothes. A chance to go places, see things. All the delightful friends and diversions which city life may give a charming girl.

COULD MARRIAGE GIVE HER MORE THAN THAT?

She thinks of the married women she knows, the drab, uninteresting, middle-aged married women; the discontented, restless, young married women, pinching along, trying to forget the days when they "had their own money."

DO THEY LOOK AS IF MARRIAGE WERE WORTH MORE THAN A CAREER?

Mother married. Yes, but mothers had to marry. That was their only way of establishing themselves in life. But now it's different. A girl can establish herself. She doesn't need a husband. Does she even want one? Isn't it better to play the game alone?

So thinks the young secretary, bending her pretty head over flying fingers. And so, across the hall, the young lawyer is also thinking.

"Bess is a great kid. Sure. Swell to play around with. But marriage? That's different. Marriage binds a fellow so. And does a fellow really need marriage as his father did? Look at the comforts of the club. And if he's lonely, any of a dozen pretty girls ready to amuse him. Then why all the responsibility and expense of a wife and home? Some day, maybe. But now?"

Everywhere young people thinking things over like that; weighing, wondering, doubting, trying to decide which pays best, Love or Life?

BUT CAN WE REALLY FIND LIFE WITHOUT LOVE?

The Responsibility; or Post Mortem

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Richard Whitney, of the New York Stock Exchange, evidently was not in the least embarrassed by the fusillade of Senatorial questions fired at him this week—because he has nothing disreputable to conceal. Some time ago it was reported that administration circles wished an investigation of "short selling," with the idea that it would reveal some dire political or international conspiracy of the bears to ruin the country and its business. Then it was recalled by some that our real trouble in America began as a result of the work of the bulls in 1928 and 1929, and it was decided that this bull movement ought also be investigated. Thereupon interest was lost for a time.

Then the other day the administration forces in the Senate, with the approval of the President, according to the press, was impressed with a "story" of a billion dollar pool which was intended to smash the market. It was intimated in some quarters that European governments were concerned, and that seemed silly. But some Senator got a telegram telling all about it. It appears that the telegram was sent by a gentleman intimately identified in a political way with the President. And so Mr. Whitney was summoned.

* * *

It Is the Public Who Make the Market

Some people have the impression that the stock market is a very vicious thing, that men on the stock market, the brokers, are wholly responsible for hysterical buying and selling of stocks; that we could dispense with the market. Some therefore found it hard to understand what Mr. Whitney meant when he insisted that his organization is merely a market place where men with stocks may sell, or others, wishing stocks, may buy.

He tried to explain that there is nothing unnatural in occasional rushes of people to dispose of these stocks. In these days of wild rumors, human nature is a bit apprehensive. Fear moves men; and fear does not always reason. This is especially true when people have lost confidence.

There would be neither buying nor selling of securities if only the brokers were concerned; it is the public who make the market. Some moron starts the story that a bank is in a bad way, and there is a run on the bank; some rumor is set afloat and men rush to the market to liquidate their securities. That is called a "bear raid." And a great many people assume that Mr. Whitney and "his crowd" manipulate the whole thing.

* * *

A Necessary Aid to Legitimate Business

The market is the best barometer of feeling among the people regarding business conditions. It also is a necessary aid to legitimate business. We are reminded by Mr. Whitney that the closing of the market "would freeze the security for bank loans of between $5,000,000,000 and $6,000,000,000." There is more common sense in a sagging market now than there was for the hysterical soaring market of 1928 and 1929; for business conditions should determine.

When a corporation or industry that has paid good dividends declares dividends off it is not a proof of turpitude for investors to sell their stock; it is remarkable when corporations that never paid a dividend find their stock soaring to 200. That is the reason that the bull market of 1928 and 1929 is more interesting as a study than the bear market of days of depression and fear.

* * *

Here Is the Story

Mr. Whitney thinks that the general public was educated into buying securities by the Liberty Loan campaigns. There is nothing wrong in that. The Liberty Bonds were the best investment in the world. The campaigns did good work in every sense. There was no gamble to it. But the ballyhoo in 1928 and 1929 for securities, at outrageous heights of businesses that barely paid a dividend, was quite different. And that campaign of hysteria was encouraged by leaders in government, too. And there is the culpability.

Mr. Whitney freely admits it.

In these questions and answers we have placed a heavy part of the responsibility for the madness which has wrought our ruin.

Q—The influence of people having the attention and confidence of the public boosting things, would contribute as much as anything the brokers said, would it not?

A—Unquestionably.

Q—If the President of the United States should in such a situation make the boosting statements, the Secretary of the Treasury also, and other great leaders of public thought, it would tend to carry that thing on, would it not, just as much as any broker saying it?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—About that time the whole country had about reached the conclusion that poverty was about to be abolished in our country forever, had they not?

A—Yes, sir. A new era was with us.

Q—And great public men were leading the country to think along that line, were they not?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—And the high-powered salesman was being tremendously aided by the high-powered political agent of prosperity, was he not?

A—Yes, sir.

And there is the story on which we have dwelt many times in these columns.

People Rushed to The "Killing"

The stock market was a market where people bought and sold, but from no quarter was so much done to intoxicate the public mind and lead it into the frenzy of speculation as from the governmental quarter. The average man with meager business experience and little business judgment is prone to be suspicious of the businessman who seeks to sell him securities. So many of the average men have bought oil wells and gold and copper mines that all stock was looked upon with suspicion.

But the average man trusts his government or did.

And when in the midst of the frenzy of speculation he found the leaders of the administration, the President, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Commerce issuing frequent statements implying that everything was sound, he felt safe in taking his money from the savings bank and mortgaging his home and his car to get money to invest in securities that had no corresponding value behind them.

Even when the time came that every one, not positively drunk with hysteria, knew there would have to be a crash, these encouraging statements continued to come in streams from public officials in the highest places.

When Carter Glass sounded a note of warning he was impatiently denounced as a killjoy.

But there was no note of warning from the administration, but on the contrary. The "high-powered political agents of prosperity," eager to win in 1928, cheered the frenzy on. Mr. Hoover told the people that we were now ready for the "elimination of poverty," that business had been put "on the basis of permanent prosperity," that henceforth and forever the people would have a "chicken in every pot" and a "car in every back yard," and "high wages" and "good dividends."

And the people believed it, and rushed to the "killing" and got killed.

No one understands that better than Mr. Whitney.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

You don't want accomplishment so much as credit for doing.

If words of commendation are given for a certain thing you generally try at least to say that it was your "suggestion."

Why are you unwilling to have others get credits and honors?

Wouldn't it be nice to feel that you had done your best and helped others on the way even if not a soul besides yourself knew it?

Instead of being the man behind the throne you want to be king.

You forget the king gets the bitterest criticism of any.

You forget the jealousies and dissatisfied subjects make the king uncomfortable.

If you could only be satisfied to help the one at the top you might get a lot more pleasure out of it because you would not be blamed for whatever mistakes were made.

But just as long as you seek advertising or credit first, just so long your way is going to be hard and your head uneasy.
